Russians Score Fresh Gains in Drive To Take Orel

Reds Also Start Powerful Drive Near Leningrad

Eighteen Divisions Reported Engaged in New Offensive

Two Thousand Germans Reported Killed East of Orel

LYNN HEINZERLING.

LONDON, Saturday, July 24 (AP)—Russian forces crashed across a river directly east of Orel, killing 2,000 Germans massed on the west bank, and scored fresh gains of two to four miles on the north and south sides of the beleaguered German central front pivot, Moscow announced early today.

German broadcasts said eighteen Soviet divisions had begun a powerful offensive south of Leningrad, but official Russian dispatches were silent on developments there.

The river crossing at Orel appeared to have put the Red army within eight miles of the city after a three-mile drive from Zolotarevo, the last village to fall in that area. Another Russian column was less than nine miles northeast of Orel.

Several more villages fell to the advancing Russians.

Repulse Nazi Attacks

North of Orel the Russians beat down several fierce German counter-attacks near Bolkhov, keystone of a strong Nazi defense network thirty-five miles above Orel, which fell to the Russians Thursday.

The Soviet drive on the north also was wheeling behind Orel, endangering the railway running northwest of Bryansk. One dispatch said Karachev, midway between the two cities on the railway, already was threatened.

A special communique said 112 planes were shot down during Thursday.

The Germans lost heavily in men in the Belgorod sector and the Donets basin to the south, and Russian forces again were attacking the Germans in the Northwestern Caucasus.

Capture More Places

After standing firm against German attacks in the Belgorod area the Russians resumed their offensive and captured a number of populated places, the communique said.

South of Izyum in the Donets basin fighting still was described by the Russians as "of local importance" despite German accounts which called it part of a general offensive.

The enemy attempted to regain positions which he lost during the previous day but achieved no success," the communique said.

Belgium Power Stations Bombed

LONDON, July 23 (AP) — Two power stations in Belgium were attacked today by RAF Bostons which dropped delayed-action bombs from a height of only fifty feet.

The Air Ministry News service quoted returning fliers as saying that all bombs "completely destroyed" the main buildings at one power station. The attack was carried out in ideal weather.

Enemy planes were reported over Southwest England and Wales last night, marking their first appearance over Britain in a week, but a communique said no bombs were dropped.

RAF Typhoons, Mustangs, Spitfires and Hurricanes of the fighter command made daylight sweeps over occupied Europe today, attacking enemy transport.

KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

MAJ. GEN. WILLIAM P. UPSHUR (right), and Capt. Charles Paddock (left), both of the United States marines, and four others were killed in an airplane crash near Sitka, Alaska, the navy announced. Paddock, one-time holder of ninety-four track records, was known in the early twenties as the "world's fastest human." He joined the marines July 10, 1942 and had served as an aide to Gen. Upshur ever since that time.

Roosevelt Hopes Rome Will Soon Be an Open City

President Deplores Bombing but Points Out Real Necessity

WASHINGTON, July 23 (AP)—Still hopeful that Rome will be declared an open city, President Roosevelt emphasized today that Monday's bombing of the Italian capital's munitions and railway facilities was dictated by military necessity to save the lives of Allied fighting men.

The chief executive offered no assurance that the swelling air might of the Allies would not again return to Rome; to the contrary, he declared that the more the Allies could keep military traffic from operating between Rome and the south the better it would be for the Allies.

Gives Italy a Chance

He told his press-radio conference that the Allies for more than a year had sought without success to have the Italian Fascist leaders declare Rome an open city, a move which would free it from attack, and added that he still hoped it would be so made.

An open city is one which contains no troops, defenses, military installations, military factories, or transportation facilities utilized for the movement of military supplies or personnel. The power in possession, having thus demilitarized the city, then could declare "open," probably subject to an inspection by a third party to see whether the conditions have been met.

Rome a Munitions Center

In discussing the raid on Rome, Mr. Roosevelt described the city as an important military center with airports, munitions factories and immense marshalling yards for the transport of troops and guns to Southern Italy.

The bombing, he said, was to protect American and British lives. He termed it very successful, and said he would not go into the quid pro quo of the question, meaning retaliation for similar raids on Allied cities on the ground that he believed that was not the essential thing.

At the same time, however, he said that the Germans had destroyed about 4,000 churches, hospitals and libraries in Britain, and commented that there was no compunction there. He reiterated then

Lewis Formally Recognizes WLB And Will Testify

Passage of Smith-Connally Act Believed To Have Changed His Mind

WASHINGTON, July 23 (AP)—Ending, at least temporarily, a long and bitter feud, John L. Lewis formally recognized the War Labor Board (WLG) today and agreed to appear before it in support of a contract which, he hopes, will be a model for settlement of the entire mine labor controversy.

Lewis's written offer to come before the board, which the president of the United Mine Workers previously has scorned, apparently removed one of the major obstacles toward settlement of the mine dispute by getting both sides in the controversy to sit down with WLB and discuss the situation

The labor leader's sudden change of mind about the board which he once charged was a "packed court", was caused, spokesmen for the UMW said, by the fact that the board now is a statutory body whereas in the past it functioned under executive decree.

The Smith-Connally labor dis-

Catholic Review Defends Bombing Of City of Rome

Places Entire Responsibility for Attack upon Mussolini

BALTIMORE, July 23 (AP) — The Catholic Review, official organ of the archdioceses of Baltimore and Washington, in an editorial today placed upon Mussolini entire responsibility for the bombing of Rome.

"Mussolini did contrive cunningly to place arsenals of destruction near the churches that we love, in the city which is home to all of us as Catholics," the editorial stated, continuing:

"We believe that the bombing of Rome was determined on in agony of spirit—not through the wish to bomb it but through the conviction it had to be done—done, with every effort to spare the sacred places.

"There has been some hypocrisy in some circles in the protests against the bombing of Rome, just as there has been protests from some hypocrites concerning the bombing of other cities and the destruction of churches in other lands. Hitler who has tried to drive Christ from Germany and other lands has raised a cry of protest against churches destroyed in Germany though his men wrecked churches, in England, in Poland, in Holland, in other invaded countries. He is the same Hitler who, with his athe-

Germany Reports Loss of Trapani, Palermo, Marsala

"According to Plan" and "An Act of God" Is Explanation

LONDON, July 23 (AP)—The Axis reported today the triple loss of Palermo, Marsala and Trapani but sought to mask defeat by presenting movements of their forces as planned concentration in the northeastern part of Sicily.

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, German military commentator said in a broadcast over the German overseas radio, recorded by the British Ministry of Information, that the "systematic evacuation" of Western Sicily was "according to plan" and that Allied moves attempting to hamper the Axis "disengagement" action and to trap large forces have been "successfully repelled."

Blames "Acts of God"

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels in his weekly article in Das Reich blamed "acts of God" for recent Axis reversals, but at the same time endeavored to assure the German people that victory was guaranteed.

Sertorius, like the German and Italian communiques, spoke of "heavy fighting" in the Central Sicilian sector, where he asserted, the Americans have been unable to reach the sea in a northerly direction.

The battle he spoke of also possibly involved Canadian troops, who apparently are swinging around on the flank of Axis forces defending Catania. In the area of the Western Catania plain the German news agency DNB reported that the British Eighth army had "temporarily" broken through the main German defense line.

German Explanation

Sertorius, declaring the Axis defense concentration in Northeastern Sicily "had long been foreseen in the operational plans of the military command," said this "methodical consolidation of defense will soon have its effect on the German-Italian capacity to resist."

Balkan repercussions to the Allied advance in Sicily were acknowledged by the Berlin radio, which said fresh disturbances had broken out and that Axis troops had fought a violent battle with Yugoslav partisans in Montenegro, resulting in 10,000 guerrillas being killed.

Unrest was also mounting in Greece, a Reuters dispatch from Ankara reported. Many Greek official and police have abandoned their posts, the dispatch said, and German occupation authorities have issued a proclamation listing these men as saboteurs subject to immediate execution.

Rome Commentators Silent

Italian radio commentators remained silent on the prospects of the Sicilian battle, but extracts from Italian newspapers published in London indicated the Fascists still were emphasizing that Germany had been able to send only limited help to the island.

The German radio reported that Senator Vittoria Cini, Italian minister of transport, had been released from his office by Premier Mussolini for "reasons of health" and that National Councillor Guiseppe Peverelli, undersecretary in the same ministry, had been appointed his successor.

Closing of all bureaus (presumably public departments) in Rome following Monday's air raid was re-

VIEW OF BATTERED PORT OF AUGUSTA

A BRITISH PATROL is shown passing through a wrecked and battered street in Augusta, big Sicilian port, after it was captured by the Allies. The effects of the terrific naval and air bombardment that the port was subjected to is evident in this street scene. Not a house is left undamaged. The Allied forces have occupied more than half of Sicily and continue to gain.

WLB Tells Unions Wage Increases Mean Inflation

Statement Says Administration Plans New Stabilization Program

WASHINGTON, July 23 (AP)—The War Labor Board solemnly cautioned labor today against seeking "inflationary wage increases" even as President Roosevelt disclosed that the administration is endeavoring to reorganize the defense against inflation with a new price control and economic stabilization program.

While acknowledging that no ideas have been agreed upon yet, the president told a press-radio conference that whatever decision is reached, Congress will have the final word because—it will cost money.

Reply to Labor

Mr. Roosevelt's announcement came less than twenty-four hours after organized labor asked him for a retail price rollback to September 15, 1942, levels or abandonment of the WLB's "Little Steel" formula. This formula declares in general that wage increases granted to compensate for higher living costs shall not total more than fifteen per cent of wages paid on Jan. 1, 1942.

The board announced today it has no intention of scrapping the formula although "other divisions of the anti-inflation army may weaken."

Presenting its position in an opinion denying wage increases to Los Angeles transit workers who struck yesterday for a twenty-four-hour period, WLB told labor that before making wage demands discordant with the stabilization program, "labor should look to what is

REPUBLICANS PLAN MEETING TO MAP PLATFORM FOR 1944

Party Leaders To Spend Two Days at Mackinac Island, Michigan, as Guest of Gov. Kelly

WASHINGTON, July 23 (AP)—Republican party leaders announced today they will meet September 6 and 7 at Mackinac island, Michigan, to lay the foundation for what may turn out to be the nucleus of a party platform for 1944.

It will be the first meeting of the full Republican postwar advisory council of forty-nine, composed of governors, legislators and national committee members, which National Chairman Harrison E. Spangler organized last May to consider a program of after-the-war foreign relations and domestic policies for submission to the party's national convention next year.

"Personally," Spangler said today, "I have no doubt that these leaders of the Republican party will present to the nation a program for international cooperation that will be a beacon of future peace to all the peoples of the globe."

Preview of Platform

The party chairman also provided an advance insight into the prime subjects that will be dealt with in the GOP platform next year. He said research material is being gathered to be turned over to subcommittees which the Mackinac meeting will appoint to consider:

1. International relations.
2. Taxation.
3. Reconversion of industry to peacetime production.
4. Orderly demobilization of the armed forces.
5. The organization and streamlining of government departments and bureaus.

Spangler said the Mackinac meeting would be the first of a series and that the Labor Day date had been selected to permit Senate and House members of the council to attend on their way back for the reconvening of Congress September 14.

Kelly To Be Host

Harry F. Kelly, Republican governor of Michigan and a believer in postwar collaboration with other nations to maintain peace, will be host to the meeting. Spangler said Kelly invited the council to meet on the island "where the members can get in two days of uninterrupted shirt-sleeve work."

Recommendations of the council will be turned over to the 1944 national convention's Resolutions committee.

Congressional members of the council discussed its objectives in a preliminary way last month. They concluded that postwar objectives divide themselves into two classes: "First, the obligation of America to do her full part to prevent a recurrence of war; second, the solution of our problems of the home front, the maintenance of full employment through the system of free enterprise, and the restoration of our fighting forces to jobs, with the speedy changeover of industry from a wartime to a peacetime basis."

Besides twenty-four Republican governors the council is composed of Senator McNary of Oregon, minority floor leader, and Senators

Allies Sink Jap Seaplane Tender In the Solomons

Also Damage Enemy Destroyer, Official Statement Declares

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, Saturday, July 24. (AP)—A big Japanese seaplane tender has been sunk by Allied airmen in the Solomons, a communique said today.

Bombs also damaged a Japanese destroyer, the bulletin said.

Thirteen Japanese planes were shot down in a battle over New Guinea in which we lost three aircraft. The Allied planes were greatly outnumbered.

Allied bombers sank twelve Japanese barges and damaged thirteen others in Huon Gulf, on which the Japanese bases of Salamaua and Lae are situated.

There were no reports on the ground situation at Munda, New Georgia, key Japanese defense position in the Central Solomons.

The heavy toll of enemy barges was taken by medium bombers which, with fighter escort, made bombing and strafing sweeps along the coast of New Guinea and New Britain from Hanisch harbor to Cape Bushing.

On the island of Timor Allied bombers attacked the enemy-held village of Viqueque.

In the northeastern sector, a night patrol bomber strafed the airdrome dispersal area at Cape Gloucester. Other machine gunning attacks against enemy villages and barges

45,000 Men Cut Off by Capture Of Coast Cities

Northwestern Area Almost Completely in Hands of the Allies

Fall of Catania to British Indicated by German Statement

By RICHARD McMURRAY
Associated Press War Editor

Cries for "peace" were reported welling up in a half dozen great Italian cities last night, and rebellion spread through the Balkans in swift consequence of the American capture of Palermo and the effective subjugation of four-fifths of all Sicily.

Reuters quoted a Stockholm dispatch declaring that Axis forces had started to evacuate Sicily. The source of the report was a dispatch from Bern, Switzerland, to the Svenska Dagbladet.

By RELMAN MORIN

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 23 (AP)—An American armored column striking with deadly speed to the North coast has captured Palermo, capital of Sicily, to trap 45,000 or more Axis troops and apparently end Axis resistance in four-fifths of the island.

The United States Seventh army tanks and cars which thundered into the sixth largest Italian city from three sides already had begun fanning out to mop up thousands of Axis troops.

The sledgehammer blow caused consternation among the surprised defenders and spread demoralization throughout the Axis camp.

Reverse at Catania

(A Rome radio broadcast recorded by NBC implied another Axis reverse on the Eastern coast at Catania, "Our forces have readjusted their positions around Catania to the rear," said the broadcast referring to the area where crack German troops have put up a stubborn defense against the British Eighth army.)

An official announcement tonight said the Americans had applied their modern tank and plane tactics to capture the big city which is the political and cultural center of Sicily.

One armored column hooked into the Sicilian capital from the southwest, another hit it from the south and southeast, and a third cut northward to intercept enemy

Berlin Reports Attack on Crete

NEW YORK, July 23 (AP)—The Berlin radio said tonight that "strong forces of Allied bombers have attacked German airfields in Crete," the large Greek island south of the Balkans. NBC recorded the broadcast.

The Germans said ten Allied planes were brought down by anti-aircraft guns alone.

The attack was reported to have been directed against German airbases and the three largest towns in Crete. The damage was called "insignificant."

The Germans said this was the first enemy action against Crete since the beginning of the invasion of Sicily and said "it obviously was made for the main purpose of probing Axis defenses in Crete."

(The report has not been confirmed by any Allied source.)

Critical Egg Shortage Predicted As Result of Buying for the Army

BALTIMORE, July 23 (AP) — Baltimore egg wholesalers declared today the city was on the verge of such an egg shortage that for several months the egg may become virtually non-existent as far as menus are concerned.

R. C. Bourbeau, manager of the Southern States co-operative's egg division, described the egg condition as "terrifically short situation —which will get worse."

Joseph Smelkinson, president of one of the city's largest wholesale firms summarized the problem:

"The trouble is that the United States government is buying most of the eggs for the armed forces, and is paying more for them than we can."

Bourbeau said a "peculiar quirk" in the situation was the fact that although the army had authority to exceed the egg price ceiling in making purchases for the armed forces, the sellers had no authority to sell at prices higher than the ceiling and thus technically were violating Office of Price Administration regulations.

Meanwhile in Washington an OPA spokesman said there would be a critical egg shortage throughout the nation by next December, adding it would be the worst egg shortage in this country's history. It will be accompanied by a bad black market, he said, and no plan for mid-winter rationing was being considered.

Normally cold storage eggs help tide Americans over the slack winter months, he said, but this year there will be no cold storage eggs for civilians—they will go to the armed forces.

Thirty per cent of the total egg production will be turned into dried eggs but—that entire thirty per cent will be bought by the government for the armed forces and lend-lease, the spokesman said.

Electric Company Officials Fear Strike Will Tie Up Pacific Lines

LOS ANGELES, July 23 (AP) — Company officials, after appealing to Washington for intervention, voiced little hope today that a strike can be averted on the Pacific Electric Interurban Line, which provides rail and bus service for a vast Southern California war-industrial and agricultural region.

"The thing is out of our hands," said O. A. Smith, Pacific Electric president. "We have tried to give the men the raise they seek. We can go no further."

The strike, which would involve some 2,000 trainmen and bus operators, members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, has been set for 2 a. m. Sunday. William P. Nutter, union leader, was in a day-long conference with members of his strategy board.

The strike, if it delevops, will affect directly about 400,000 persons who use the company's lines daily. Many thousands of them are workers in aircraft, shipyards and other essential industries, and their employers were attempting to make provision for their transportation if the expected tieup materializes.

War Production Lagging, Somervell And Charles E. Wilson Point Out

CHICAGO, July 23 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commanding the army service forces, and Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman of the War Production Board, said today that war production is "seriously lagging."

Their remarks were prepared for a joint appearance before some 1,500 Chicago area war plant executives at an Association of Commerce luncheon.

"We come to you today in complete agreement that our production program, required to meet our schedules to supply our armed forces, is seriously lagging and that our people must be informed of the grave consequences if we fail to obtain their unstinted support," General Somervell said.

"Our current production rates and reserves can only be considered ample if we assume the early collapse of our enemies and we have no safe basis for any such conclusion," Wilson declared. "It would be foolhardy for us to rest hopefully on any such idle assumptions."

Wilson said requirements rise from month to month, calling for

German Panzers Outpanzered by American Troops

Fall of Palermo So Rapid Even Invaders Are Surprised

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

The fall of Palermo, Sicilian capital, to American armored forces, moving more swiftly than did the once vaunted Nazi panzer spearheads at the outside of the war, does more than write all Western and Central Sicily off the war books.

It clamps a powerful, steel-shod western jaw on the two main Sicilian lateral communication routes north and south of the Peloritan mountains. American pressure eastward on either will take Axis forces on the flank. An indicated fifteen mile further Canadian advance from the Ramacca region in the east center of the Allied line toward Adrano would turn the inshore end of the Nazi line on the south and southeast slopes of Mount Etna holding up the British advance at Catania.

Nazi Retreat Predicted

Nazi retreat into the jumbled hills of the Messina peninsula under the triple Allied pressure is closely impending, with small prospect that any considerable part of the shattered Axis armies in Sicily can escape to the Italian mainland. They are now dependent for reenforcements and supplies on such small trickles of aid as can reach them at night across the Messina strait in light surface craft. There is virtually no airfield remaining open to them in all Sicily.

How long it may take to mop up the last Axis resistance in Northeastern Sicily can only be guessed at; but it well may be only a matter of days. West of the American break-through to the North coast at Palermo, there is little reason to expect any major fighting. And that western end of the island, with its harbors, its network of hard-surfaced roads and railways and its span of only ninety miles to Cape Bon in Tunisia is already pointing an ominous Allied threat at Sardinia, Corsica and the Southeastern coast of metropolitan France itself.

Logical Advance Base

Western Sicily is the logical first advance base for the mounting of a French-American drive to liberate continental France. It seems obvious that the return to France when it comes, will be under American, not British auspices, with French troops in the van. General Henri Giraud has pledged himself to that.

The first step to Sicily has now been taken. The next to Sardinia and Corsica cannot be long delayed to complete a land based Allied blockade line about Italy proper to the west.

Both are in a virtual state of siege now. From bases in Northwestern Sicily Allied planes can sweep the Tyrrhenian and Ligurian seas that wash Italy's South and East coasts. British-American naval power based on Sicily can range those Italian waters at will with little fear of what is left of Italy's once powerful fleet. Sardinia and Corsica are as much a trap for their isolated Axis garrisons as Sicily proved and it remains to be seen whether they will offer even a token resistance.

Well adapted in terrain for major troop concentrations, both islands—and particularly Corsica—have good air field sites from which the whole continental coast from Toulon to Rome would be in fighter-protected light bomber range. And Corsica is already stirring with revolt against Italian invaders. It obviously offers brilliant prospects of a quick Allied advance to within 100 miles of the mainland coast of Northern Italy.

Barber Fined $1,000 For Selling Gas Coupons

BALTIMORE, July 23 (AP) — Louis J. Coliano, 30-year-old Baltimore barber, was fined $1,000 in federal court today after pleading guilty to selling 144 gasoline ration coupons.

Federal Judge William C. Coleman in imposing the fine, told government attorneys they were "too lenient" in prosecuting purchasers, as well as sellers, of gasoline coupons.

The barber admitted fourteen illegal sales of A, B, C and T coupons for a total of $68.

United States Attorney Bernard J. Flynn told the court that most of the purchasers were factory employes, who testified before the grand jury and offered information without which Coliano could not have been prosecuted. Therefore, Flynn said, the grand jury did not indict them.

Similar cases before Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut today resulted in a six-month sentence against Antonio Messina and a $100 fine against Salvatore DePaola. The two were convicted of illegal possession of large quantities of gasoline ration coupons.

Roosevelt Hopes

that it was not a question of retaliation in bombing Rome, and said that sometimes it becomes necessary to save lives and that such raids are inevitable and necessary.

The president declined to comment on the letter of Pope Pius XII to his vicar general in Rome deploring the bombing. He said he had received no communication from the pope.

45,000 Men Cut

forces withdrawing from Palermo toward the east.

45,000 Men Cut Off

It's estimated that approximately three divisions, 45,000 men, now are cut off in Western Sicily.

Repercussions of the lightning seizure came from all over Italy and the Balkans.

Madrid dispatches said Italians demonstrated in the streets of Rome, Venice, Milan, Turin, Florence and Trieste, shouting "peace."

Strikes and sabotage were reported sweeping the country, and the Balkans was rumbling with reports of rebellion. Rome already was the scene of a large-scale civilian evacuation movement.

The battle for Sicily appeared to be falling rapidly into the same pattern as the battle for Tunisia in its closing stages.

Converge on Northeast

The capture of Palermo with its extensive shipping, naval and air facilities gave to the Allies a dominating port on the Tyrrhenian sea approach to Rome, and reports at Allied headquarters tonight indicated that all Allied armies were converging swiftly toward the one remaining active battle line in Northeastern Sicily.

Axis resistance was now compressed in the northeastern tip, in an area but little larger than Cap Bon where Col. Gen. Jurgen von Arnim's army met catastrophe in Tunisia.

Defending Catania, the southern gateway to the escape port of Messina on this tip, the Nazi Hermann Goering division fought with unabated tenacity in a battle which had held Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth army veterans to a yard-by-yard progress for eight days.

Canadians Advancing

But the Canadians, on Montgomery's west wing, were reported swinging around the German's flank, meeting fierce resistance but driving the Fifteenth German armored division before them.

And the main American force, despite the sweep of its units over most of Western Sicily, was reported to be in the area northeast of Enna where it could bear directly upon the Nazi's western flank.

The capture of Palermo was the feat of an American division which exceeded even the expectations of the American commander, the speed specialist Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., by romping a distance of more than sixty miles in fifty-eight hours from Enna in Central Sicily.

Meet Little Resistance

The advance elements penetrated the city at 10 a. m. yesterday, so paralyzing the large defense forces who had believed their enemy at least fifteen miles away that there was virtually no resistance when the main body of the invaders arrived. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's communique said the capture was completed by evening.

The Italians were so surprised that they had no time to carry out elaborate preparations to blow up docks and other military installations and these fell into Allied hands without damage except for that done by their own bombs.

This can be quickly repaired, it was said, and the Allies will then have a most advantageous springboard for naval and air action over Sardinia and Italy and their sea approaches.

The city's population of more than 300,000 makes it the largest in Sicily.

Italian defenders complained that they had been given no assistance by their navy except for the sending of a fast speedboat to remove a number of high naval officers at the last moment.

However, Allied headquarters announced today the capture of Admiral Priato Leonard, former commandant of Augusta naval base.

There was no word today of the progress of the American columns thrusting along Sicily's southwestern coast and last reported at Castelvetrano. They were believed far beyond that point, however.

Spreading over a huge area of the island like a flood, American forces had now established an "L"-shaped line running from Palermo to Mezzoiuso, fifteen miles to the south, then west through Carleone, Campofiorito, Contessa Entellina, Santa Margherita Di Belice, Montevago, Castelvetrano and beyond.

(This line leaves an area of only about 1,250 square miles in Western Sicily outside the zone of Allied occupation.)

Praising the Americans, who had slashed nearly 200 miles across Sicily from Gela in twelve days and captured 27,000 prisoners, and lauding their Canadian allies, Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, Allied ground troops commander, declared both armies were destined to become the finest in the world.

"The Americans are very fine fighting troops indeed," he said, declaring they had improved 100 per cent since they gained their first experience in actual combat in Tunisia.

Allied air forces maintained their rounds of devastating attacks, aiming particularly at the Italian mainland's battered and vulnerable rail network for the fifth time in six days and nights.

Flying Fortresses laid explosive strings across the tracks at Foggia in Southwestern Italy. Medium bombers scored many direct hits on similar targets at Salerno and Battapaglia south of Naples, light bombers raided the airfields at Salerno and Capodichino near Naples, and Canadian Wellingtons also struck at Capodichino and other targets near Naples.

(The Italian communique said Allied raiders caused considerable damage at Foggia and Salerno, and some damage at small centers in Lazio and Campagna Romana, near Rome.)

RAF Bostons and Baltimores, turning a withering spray upon the twisting roads near Mt. Etna, reported the destruction of sixty-five trucks at one point and damage to 300 more in the Troina, Aderno, Paterno and Misterbianco areas.

Fooling Censor Best Pastime of Soldiers Abroad

"Code in the Head" Afflicts Large Numbers of Troops

By RELMAN MORIN

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, July 23 (AP)—Army doctors may have a different idea but army censors claim the most common ailment among American troops overseas is "code in the head."

As soon as he gets abroad the average doughboy is beset with an overwhelming desire to tell the folks back home exactly where he is stationed. That is strictly against army regulations because it might disclose the location of an entire army unit.

So a soldier sets about to outfigure the censors with home made codes designed to impact that information.

Some Smart Writers

There have been some fairly ingenious ones according to the men who scan the letters. One lad tried to spell out "Tunis" by writing five consecutive letters to his mother and giving her five different middle initials.

The trouble was the five letters arrived out of sequence. The five initials spelled "Nutsi" and somewhat bewildered parents wrote that, "we cannot find that place anywhere in North Africa."

A variation of this method was tried by another soldier who openly notified his parents in his first letter that the first letter of the first word of each subsequent letter would spell the name and place where he was. The censors punished him by eliminating the opening sentence of every letter then told him not to do it any more.

Movie Are Help

Hundreds of soldiers tried referring to the titles of recent movies such as "Casablanca" and "Road to Morocco" as means of getting information across. One who was sightly more subtle referred to the theme song of Casablanca telling his parents that for months he had been whistling "As Times Goes By."

His folks did not tumble. His mother replied "That's a long time to sing the same song. Should I send you some new phonograph records?"

Now the doughboys are in Sicily the censors expect to find letters freighted with cryptic references to fiery sweethearts named "Etna."

And they are willing to bet the first letters from the Italian capital will tell folks home, "I have been Roaming around quite a bit etc."

Note from Sailors Found in Glass Jug

CRISFIELD, Md., July 23. (AP)—Capt. Willie B. Middleton, Smith's island, Md., crabber, reported today finding in Chesapeake bay, early this month, a glass jug containing a piece of paper marked, "March 6, 1942, coast of North Africa, four sailors on a raft."

Middleton said the jug also contained an ace-of-diamonds playing card and the paper was heavily stained by salt water.

The only other notation on the paper, he added, were the following names and addresses:

"Sam S. Wooten, Cox, AGC, USN, Fifty-Second and First avenues, South Brooklyn, N. Y. (from State Ohio).

"George F. Bosse, 62 Woodstock Road, Rochester, N. Y.

"Lee A. Whealton, 521 West Third street, Washington, N. C.

"Toney Turner, gunner, New York."

Edward McLean, Jr. Sues for Divorce

RENO, Nev. July 23 (AP) — Edward B. McLean, Jr., Washington, D. C., today filed suit for divorce from the former Ann C. Meem, charging extreme cruelty.

The wealthy son of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, current owner of the famous Hope diamond, and his wife were married in Washington May 25, 1938. They have two children, Emily Beale McLean and Edward Beale McLean III.

Mrs. McLean's attorney, John Sinai, said she would contest the action and file a cross-complaint for divorce.

Attorneys said the couple has reached a private agreement adjusting property rights and care and custody of the children.

Fleet Shells Kiska

WASHINGTON, July 23 (AP) — A Pacific fleet task force heavily bombarded Japanese positions on Kiska island yesterday, the navy announced today. Enemy coast defense guns returned the fire but failed to damage any of the warships.

Thomas Says Allies Are Laying Foundations For New World War

WASHINGTON, July 23. (AP) — Norman Thomas, Socialist party leader, said tonight that the United Nations are "laying the foundations for new war by their obvious intention to perpetuate their own imperialism."

In an address prepared for a mass meeting in connection with a quarterly reunion of the party's executive committee, Thomas said:

"Great Britain has not promised to restore Hong Kong to China. We have not repealed unilateral Chinese exclusion, and we have intensified our own racial tension. Churchill has announced bluntly 'we mean to hold our own. I have not become the king's first minister to preside over the dissolution of the British empire.' This statement has not been changed or modified in any way by Mr. Churchill or protested by our government.

"As it stands, it means that American boys are fighting to restore Burma and Malaya to British rule and to keep India under British rule. This is to make a third world war virtually inevitable."

State Guardsmen To Train for Week

BALTIMORE, July 23 (AP)—Using tactics adopted by the British home guards, the Maryland state guard's eleven battalions will train together for the first time at the week-long encampment at Fort George G. Meade beginning Sunday, Brig. Gen. Dwight H. Mohr said today.

Commanding officer of the state guard, Gen. Mohr recently returned from an inspection of the British guardsmen.

Approximately 2,000 men and 200 officers are expected to participate in the week of intensive training.

Gen. Mohr said that no minute men would be included in next week's encampment.

Bookmakers Scored By Judge O'Dunne

BALTIMORE, July 23 (AP)—Judge Eugene O'Dunne, during his two weeks in the summer session of criminal court, ended today, exacted a total of $28,957 in fines and costs from defendants in gambling cases.

Today he imposed a single fine of $2,000 for violation of the anti-betting and lottery laws, then scored bookmakers and other gamblers as "not good sports."

Judge O'Dunne criticized some of the big fellows for paying their way out and letting smaller fry go to jail.

No moral turpitude was involved in the "bookie" game in Baltimore, he declared, adding that it was a sporting proposition that good sports put their money on the line.

That, said the jurist, is "righteous sportsmanship."

WLB Tells Unions

likely to happen if the program is broken down."

Must Make Sacrifices

"The present day problems of our domestic economy are becoming so serious and critical," said the opinion written by Wayne L. Morse, public member of WLB, "that the board must hold the lid on wages and, at least for the time being, must insist that labor make wage sacrifices."

Declaring that the board intends to hold the line against inflation "in so far as demands for inflationary wage increases are concerned," the opinion observed:

"The time has come for labor to realize that if we are going to stop inflation we cannot continue to raise wages in the wage brackets which are not substandard.

"However, having made sacrifices in the form of unrealized wage increases and decreased purchasing power, labor is in an excellent position to voice the demand that prices be rolled back to reasonable levels and that the cost of living be strictly controlled."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Phillip Murray, head of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, said yesterday that unless price levels of ten months ago are restored labor will discontinue support of the entire stabilization program and seek removal of price Administrator Prentiss Brown.

President Roosevelt told his conference he did not regard this as an ultimatum but added that labor as well as other groups are in a predicament because food prices have not been kept at levels of September 15 as called for by Congress.

The assertion by Green and Murray was interpreted by Senator Taft (R-Ohio), however, as a "threat" to the Little Steel formula. He added that labor appeared to be "asking for something impossible" in its demand for the price rollback.

Both Taft and Senator Hatch (D-NM) expressed belief that Brown faces an almost impossible task under present conditions and predicted that the subsidy question will be back in the lap of Congress as soon as it reconvenes. Both also defended Brown's efforts to keep prices and wages in line.

Legion Growing

INDIANAPOLIS, July 23 (AP)—The American Legion announced today its 1943 enrollment has reached a new high of 1,136,290. Legion officials said the final enrollment for this year probably would exceed 1,150,000.

State Restaurant Men To Meet OPA Committee Aug. 5

Meetings Planned for All Counties after Prices Are Frozen

BALTIMORE, July 23. (AP)—The State Restaurant Advisory committee set up by the Office of Price Administration announced today all rationing boards in the state would meet with restaurant operators in their counties on August 5, ten days after the food and beverage price freeze becomes effective.

The regional OPA in New York has announced that prices of food and beverages in eating places in several states, including Maryland, would be frozen July 26 to April 4 to 10 levels.

The meetings of operators and ration boards throughout Maryland will attempt to solve problems which may have arisen in the program by then, the committee announced.

Baltimore city operators will meet with the State committee and with representatives of the state OPA.

Leo H. McCormick, state OPA director, said the price freeze was important to war workers, many of whom, he said, were entirely dependent upon restaurants for food.

A committee spokesman said particular attention would be given to the program in lunch rooms and restaurants in war areas, although to the best of committee members knowledge, there would be "no tremendous rollback", as most eating places had maintained prices at April 4 to 10 levels.

Under the restaurant price stabilization program every eating place in Maryland must, beginning on August 2, print a statement on every menu that prices are the same or lower than those charged between April 4 and 10.

Bullitt Is Candidate In Philadelphia

WASHINGTON, July 23 (AP) — Navy Secretary Knox accepted today the resignation of William C. Bullitt, his special assistant secretary, who has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for mayor of Philadelphia.

Lewis Formally

putes act, which gave WLB legal status, empowered the board to subpoena witnesses and records in considering labor disputes. The board had no such power when it earlier requested the union to come before it, and since the mine wage discussions started last March, Lewis repeatedly ignored the requests.

Lewis's recognition of WLB was in the form of a letter to Board Chairman William H. Davis. The UMW chieftain wrote that he and Illinois mine operators "stand ready to appear before you" to support a contract between the union and the Illinois Coal Operators association.

Model Contract Appproved

The contract, approved this week and accepted yesterday by the UMW Policy committee as a model for the entire coal industry, provides for portal-to-portal pay of $1.25 daily, and a forty-eight-hour-week, with time and one-half pay for hours worked in excess of thirty-five each week.

The WLB previously rejected a portal-to-portal, or non-productive travel time, proposal for the entire bituminous industry and directed the operators and the union to enter into an agreement without that provision unless they could name a portal-to-portal figure that did not constitute what the board considered a hidden wage increase.

Lewis termed the board's proposed contract a "yellow dog" agreement.

Co-signer of the letter to Davis was Ray Edmundson, president of UMW district twelve, Illinois.

"We believe the agreement" with the Illinois operators "is in the public interest and stand ready to appear before you in its support in such hearings as you may elect," they wrote. "We sincerely recommend its approval by the board."

The board promptly called a public hearing in the Illinois case for Aug. 3.

Postwar Groups Plan To Form Council

BALTIMORE, July 23 (AP)—Chairmen of various state and city planning organizations have agreed to consider plans for establishment of the Baltimore Postwar Coordination Council in an attempt to avoid duplication of effort and overlapping of functions among the several postwar planning groups, G. H. Pouder, executive vice-president of the Association of Commerce, said today.

The planning chairmen, Pouder said, had agreed to place the proposal before their organizations.

"The ultimate aim of the Coordination Council," he continued, "would be to integrate into one community-wide pattern the separate phases of postwar activity now engaged in by the different groups working in the field."

War Production

fifty per cent more war production in the closing months of 1943 "than we are now producing."

He said that in May the rise in output fell below the rise in requirements and that in June "we set a goal of six and one-half billions but produced only six billions—missing the mark seriously by almost nine per cent."

General Somervell said American industry had made "a magnificent record" but that "the job will never be done until the enemy has been defeated and the United States is no longer at war."

Electric Company

The company serves a seventy-five-mile radius, with Los Angeles as its hub. The heavily industrialized harbor area with its shipyards, oil fields and refineries is affected as are other districts with important military installations and war plants.

Appeals to Washington for intervention were made today by Smith and Mayor Fletcher Bowron. The latter said, after speaking to Dr. William Leiserson, chairman of the national railway labor panel, that apparently only presidential intervention could halt the walkout. Smith reported he was told by Leiserson that "the matter is receiving active attention."

Up to White House

Bowron urged Dr. Leiserson to obtain another review of the case by the government's emergency board, and was told, he said, that only the White House or the director of economic stabilization could authorize such a step.

The dispute started when Pacific Electric employes, receiving an 87-cents-per-hour maximum, demanded a thirteen-cent increase, which was granted by the company. The new rate went for approval to Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson, who reduced the boost to three cents an hour.

The authorization for the Pacific Electric strike came as employes of the Los Angeles Railway Company ended at 2 a. m. today a walkout which had tied up the city lines for twenty-four hours.

But the brotherhood declares the Pacific Electric strike will not be limited to one day.

"For self-preservation we are leaving our jobs not for twenty-four hours but for thirteen cents an hour," its grievance committee declared.

Allies May Link Up with Russians

ISTANBUL, July 23 (AP)—A growing conviction here today is that the Allies are about to strike in the Eastern Mediterranean to link up with the Soviet offensive in Russia.

Balkan unrest appeared to be increasing steadily and it was learned the Germans are taking over complete command of all Greek ports and the Corinth canal region.

From Rumania Marshal Ion Antonescu, leader of the state, sent two divisions to reinforce garrisons in Bucovina, Bessarabia and Odessa against the possibility of a Russian breakthrough.

In Bulgaria, Sofia police were called out last Tuesday to quell rioting, a recently returned traveler said. Two policemen and several rioters were killed in the fight which was believed to have grown out of pro-Russian demonstrations.

The traveller also said that 200 persons were arrested in Macedonia before Bulgarian Prime Minister Bogdan Philov visited there.

At Bogadjim, a costal village twenty miles south of Madang, heavy bombers dropped sixty-one tons of fragmentation and emolition bombs, scoring many direct hits on buildings and installations and causing large fires.

"The enemy offered air battle with approximately sixty fighters between Lae and Bogadjim and was decisively defeated and dispersed," the communique said. "He lost thirteen airplanes definitely seen to crash and five other probables and at least five others shot out of combat and either destroyed or seriously damaged.

"Two of our fighters were shot down and destroyed."

Reds Also Start

Several thousand Germans have been killed in four days of fighting southwest of Voroshilovgrad where active operations were continuing as the Soviet forces captured several "advantageous positions." The Germans were counterattacking again and again in this area.

Orel is ringed by an arc of charging Russians forces on the south, east, north and northwest. Those units that have curled around behind the city are close to the Orel-Bryansk railway and were reported by Moscow to be on the approaches of Karachev, a city on the railway twenty-seven miles from Bryansk which likewise was threatened by the Russian surge.

Around Belgorod, 165 miles south of Orel, the Russians said they advanced from three and a half to five miles. It was the fourth successive gain in this area where the Germans made their lone penetration in their abortive offensive against Kursk.

Reds Attack in South

Attacking the stubborn German bridgehead thinly spread along the Black sea littoral around Novorossisk, the Russians said they improved their positions southwest of Krasnodar. The naval base of Novorossisk is their objective.

Berlin said violent new Russian attacks in the Donets basin had pierced their lines near Kuibishevo.

The Donets theater is 300 miles south of Orel, and the latent warfare there apparently has been fanned into a fresh offensive by a shift of German forces to the Orel sector. For several days, the Russians have spoken of "local fighting" in the Donets basin which Moscow said tended to assume the proportion of major battles. The Russian custom is to announce offensives after they are really rolling.

The German communique, broadcast by radio Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press, said:

German Statement

"The enemy has extended his large scale attacks against the Eastern front to further sectors. The enemy started his attack after violent artillery preparation and with the support of tanks and battle planes. All enemy attacks were frustrated. The Soviets continued their onslaught against German positions on a front from the Sea of Azov to Belgorod."

Although admitting broken lines and "fluctuating fighting," the Germans asserted their "armies on the Eastern front are standing firm and unshaken."

$50,000 Gate Is Predicted for Hollywood Fight

Henry Armstrong and Willie Joyce End Workouts for Go Tonight

HOLLYWOOD, July 23 (AP)—Encouraged by prospects of a gate that might run $50,000 or more, bull-shouldered Henry Armstrong and light-footed Willie Joyce eased through final workouts today for their scheduled ten-round fight at Gilmore stadium tomorrow night.

Promoter Joy Lynch reported there already is around $25,000 in the till. Under normal conditions that might indicate a gross of $75,000. But with gas rationing, street car strikes and threats of more car strikes, few of the experts would bet that the take will much exceed $50,000.

The bettors have installed the dusky Armstrong a 2 to 1 favorite over the Gary, Ind., negro, and some of the gamblers were willing to wager 1 to 2½ that Joyce is knocked out.

Much depends on the condition of the two boxers. Armstrong suffered badly lacerated lips in winning from Sammy Angott in New York June 11 and Joyce sustained a broken jaw at Armstrong's hands in their last bout here, although Joyce won the decision. The medics have pronounced both injuries healed, but the public is waiting to see.

Armsstrong's backers figure he's getting a break by the fact that the bout will be fought in a sixteen-foot ring. If Joyce elects to adopt the back-pedaling tactics he employed in their last battle, it should be easier for Henry to reach him, they reason. Their last fight was in a twenty-foot ring, and Henry never could catch up to the elusive Willie long enough to tag him properly. The smaller ring should be made to order for Armstrong's relentless forward-shuffling style.

Neither lad will have any trouble making the 145-pound limit. Joyce won't exceed 137 and Henry shouldn't tip the beam at more than 140 or 141.

Abe Roth will referee.

Doerr Sets New Fielding Records For Second Basemen

BOSTON, July 23 (AP) — Two new Major League fielding records for second basemen were definitely set today when Bobby Doerr of the Red Sox, made his first error in sixty games by dropping Chicago Luke Appling's pop fly at Fenway Park.

Doerr now is credited with records of accepting 342 consecutive chances and playing fifty-nine games in a row without a miscue. The previous consecutive chances record of 271 was set by Oscar Melillo for the St. Louis Browns in 1934 and Max Bishop, back in 1926 for the Philadelphia Athletics, established the old errorless game mark by handling 267 chances in fifty-three games.

Cows Are Used To Keep Grass Down On Golf Course

FREDERICK, Md., July 23 (AP) — Members of the Catoctin Country Club are playing golf under difficulties these days. Short of help, cows are being used to keep the grass trimmed in the club's fairways.

To keep the bovines off the greens, electrically charged wires have been stretched around the putting surfaces.

So the players, after being confronted by the "walking hazards" on the fairways, have to climb under or over the wires to get onto the greens.

Geary Wants To Join Buffalo Bisons

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 23 (AP)—Eugene (Huck) Geary, the Pittsburgh Pirates' shortstop who is under suspension for leaving the team last week, notified club officials today he would like to join the Buffalo Bisons of the International League.

Geary, whose home is here and who was given permission by Pirate President William E. Benswanger to make a deal for himself, asked the club in a telegram to name a price for his contract.

After a conference with Geary, Bison General Manager John C. Stiglmeier said "we would like to have Geary and we're willing to pay above the waiver price for him."

The Pirates bought Geary for $25,000 last season from Minneapolis. The waiver price is $7,500.

North End Beats West Side, 2-1

North End downed West Side, 2-1, behind the pitching of Lou Stitcher in a Junior Victory League game played on North End's diamond before one of the biggest crowds of the season yesterday evening.

Stitcher, with Cumiskey as his battery mate, struck out nine West Side batsmen in the victory. Kauffman and Cox each cracked out a triple to lead the attack and Cox also starred afield. Bucy and Smuts were the West Side battery.

Subsidies and Inflation

SUBSIDIES, declares Frank Gannett, newspaper publisher, in a letter just sent to all members of Congress, as well as "rollbacks," and incentive payments, are only a delusion. "The dollars which they add to the total spending power," he says, "are just as inflationary as though they were added by price increases. Furthermore, subsidy dollars add to the national debt and maneuver producer and consumer into subservience to bureaucracy. Subsidy 'rollbacks' are equivalent to putting part of our grocery bill 'on the cuff' for returning soldiers and sailors and their children to pay later by taxation."

This is the viewpoint taken by this newspaper, and it is the same as that which has so forcibly expressed by the able member of the House of Representatives for the Western Maryland district, J. Glenn Beall.

In a statement accompanying his letter to members of the Congress, the uppermost purpose of which is to further ways and means of preventing inflation, Gannett amplified his views on subsidies, and in view of what this newspaper believes to be the sentiment of a majority of the people of this district, they should be of interest to its readers.

"Subisidies," Garrett stated, "will not give us one pound more of food this year, and they will discourage production next year. Any rollback of prices eventually will cost the consumer, in taxes, probably two or three times the immediate apparent saving.

"If President Roosevelt's policy of a fifty per cent rollback on prices of food had any merit, then a rollback of fifteen per cent, twenty-five per cent or seventy-five per cent would have even more merit. Once started, where will the rollbacks stop? Will they be increased again and again until the government supplies all of us—rich and poor alike—with food at the expense of the taxpayer?

"Subsidies will destroy our price system, the most effective mechanism for distribution ever devised. Every business and group affected by subsidies could become dependent upon the favor of government for handouts. Carried far, this policy would destroy our private enterprise system and our constitutional form of government. It would open the door for a dictator who could keep himself in power by the slightly amended formula of 'tax and tax, subsidize and subsidize, elect and elect,' as did Caesar doling out bread to the Romans.

"Subsidies will feed inflation, for although they might seem to the unthinking to lessen the cost of food to the consumer, they actually will increase its cost. The additional money left in circulation by these deceptive lower food prices to consumers made possible through subsidies, will be used to bid up the prices of other goods."

Too many persons, including, as Gannett says, the president, talk a lot about inflation but ignore the fact that it is already occurring. Few will contradict his assertion that prices have risen nearly a third in the last two years, which means that inflation is not only on our doorstep but is "already in our house"; and, as he says, inflation, unchecked, leads to ruination.

An Impressive Illustration

THE NECESSITY for adequate support and strengthening of the essential civilian economy has been stressed by the plight of the laundry business. It has been experiencing a most trying time, more so, perhaps, than most, as has been discovered by many households, boarding houses, restaurants, barber shops, bakeries and textile mills. Shirts, underwear, towels, table linen, kitchen linen, bed linen, have all been coming in late, sometimes weeks after collection. Lately, it is good to note, there has been an improvement in the local situation, laundries having managed to catch up considerably.

To meet this situation, which has obtained generally all over the country, housewives who have home laundry facilities are washing their own dirty linen, incidentally using up more soap in so doing, and using up strength also which they need for what they are doing in the war program. Men and women have been buying additioal work clothes and linen at the stores. So have all kinds of business establishments. So have factory workers. This extra demand has been passed on to the garment factories and the textile mills, thus showing how any weakening of the essential civilian economy extends into the war effort. Possibilities of an epidemic should sterilized towels and the like become scarcer is another angle of a bad situation.

Now, what is the cause of all this? The Cincinnati Times-Star points to the answer, saying that, as usual, it is "government planning of the dumb sort that seems to go with a New Deal mortarboard. To the Washington highbrows," it adds, "the laundry business is just a money-making matter, not an essential industry. Three alphabetical agencies have denied it the right to buy machinery, to hold its skilled workers, to make prompt collections and deliveries. As a result, things have begun to go wrong in a number of unexpected places."

The situation is one that should never have been allowed to develop and the fact that it has only emphasizes the contention of those who have been contending that a most important phase of the war program is the maintenance of an adequate civilian economy.

The Petrillos and The Government

A YEAR HAS PASSED since James C. Petrillo, arrogant head of the musicians' union, ordered the abolition of the transcription and juke box business. When the action was ordered, most Americans treated it as a joke.

The Petrillo position was almost naive—to eliminate recording machines from every small restaurant and prevent radio stations from obtaining transcriptions and thus force them to install musicians. The plea that it would drive many stations off the air, since they could not afford orchestras, brought only a shrug from the union boss.

But a year has passed and Petrillo's edict still stands. He refuses even to negotiate. James C. Petrillo is one of the men "made" into a national figure by the excesses of the Wagner act. He is as powerful in his field as John L. Lewis is in coal mining. The friends of labor have pleaded constantly with so-called labor leaders to clean their own house. But they have stood pat.

Members of Congress are at home now, sounding out the sentiments of their constituents. What they are going to find out is that people want action on just such men as Petrillo. It is time the Petrillos are taught that they are not the government.

"Explaining" The Jap

WHAT accounts for the overbearing, bullying conduct on the part of the Japanese soldier, so frequently reported in dispatches? Prof. John F. Embree, a Canadian anthropologist, says it is due to a severe emotional shock which most of the Japs receive while they are still babies.

Japanese mothers give each baby all their attention until the next one arrives. The infant nurses at any time it wishes and if it sees anything it wants, it can have it simply by putting up a howl. That works fine for the time being, says the professor, but when the next baby arrives, the first is placed in less tender-care. Frequent tantrums of temper follow. This sudden shift in the status of motherly affection, explains the professor, creates an early sense of insecurity which in turn produces an adult who is never sure of himself and who, through compensation, may become almost a paranoiac. The manifestation is frequently desire for assassination or suicide.

Professor Embree sees Japan as essentially a nation of peasant culture which has undertaken the engrafting of the material side of western culture without compensating mental and spiritual attitudes of the West. The result is an incongruous mixture which plays hob with the Japanese as an individual.

Maybe so. But most persons will continue to regard the Jap as a yellow rat who couldn't be anything except what he is because he was born that way.

That Rich Uncle

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Suppose you did have a Rich Uncle—

A bachelor, worth millions, and no one to leave his money to but YOU.

Marshall Maslin

What if you did have one? Well, it might be bad for you. You'd always be waiting for him to die. No matter how much you liked him, you might be thinking about all the money you'd have when he died. And that wouldn't be so good for you or for him, either.

Bad for your character and for his. He'd know you waiting for him to die, and you'd know that he knew that something of the sort was in his mind. He'd become a benevolent tyrant, maybe; you'd become a sychophantic slave. It would be uncle-this and uncle-that and uncle-says-this and uncle-doesn't-like-that. You'd get sick of it; soon you'd be ashamed of yourself and you'd not have much fun at all.

And while waiting for that Nice Old Gentleman With All that Money to die, you'd cheat yourself of some living. It would cramp your own style and you wouldn't work hard enough and wouldn't develop your own powers.

He might "live forever", too. And when you finally inherited the money you'd be too old to enjoy it. The sparkle would be out of life. You'd be wilted and worn and have that frightened, expectant look in your eyes—of a spirit-broken pup that doesn't know whether it's about to be kicked or petted.

And after all, he might NOT leave All That Money to you. He might invest it foolishly. He might marry some Designing Creature and leave you holding the empty sack of your meager delusions. Then you'd be bitter and feel cheated. You'd blame him, blame everybody; you'd blame life and have a face like a dried up apple with a worm in it. And what a life, what a way to live! And if you did get that Rich Uncle's money you'd be hating your own nieces and nephews and begin to suspect that they are just waiting around for YOU to die.

It might NOT be like this if you didn't have a dime and your uncle had millions, but it's too great a risk to take. . . Maybe you'd better not have a Rich Uncle after all. Too much trouble.

Capital Believes Byrnes Is Choice For Second Place

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—Here in the national capital the betting is at long odds in favor of James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, as President Roosevelt's choice to run in second place after the latter on next year's national Democratic ticket.

Charles P. Stewart

Of course, this is assuming that F. D. R. intends to seek a fourth term in the White House, but that generally is accepted as a foregone conclusion. It is true that Jimmy Byrnes (once a Palmetto State representative in Congress, then a senator, next an associate supreme court justice and now chief of the Office of War Mobilization, which is frequently referred to as Uncle Sam's deputy presidency) has said he is not a candidate for the v. p.'s office. However, few, if any, doubts are expressed that he'll acquiesce, if requested by the executive mansion's current tenant to do so.

Excuse Is Furnished

Henry Wallace never has been considered particularly close to Franklin D. Still, he always was an enthusiastic New Dealer. As the country's regularly elected vice president, there was no way of getting rid of him, anyhow. There isn't yet, pending expiration of the period he was chosen for.

Henry's row with Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones has furnished the excuse, though.

Jesse, to be sure, could have been fired as a cabinet member, but Henry could not be fired as vice president. He lasts, in that capacity, while his original four years do. Yet, the White House was fixed to spank both of them.

Side Jobs

Henry, in a side job, independently of his stunt as the Senate's presiding officer, was charged with the duty of making wartime bargains with foreign countries. Jesse, in another side job, independently of his job as secretary of commerce, was responsible for footing the bills agreed to by Wallace.

Henry wouldn't modify his bills. Jesse wouldn't liquidate all of them.

This was the nub of the controversy. The worst of it was that the language exchanged between the disputants was something awful.

Well, President Roosevelt, while he could not "can" Henry out of his vice presidency, could and did "can" him out of his bargain-making function. And he "canned" Jesse Jones out of his bill-paying authority. Why he likewise didn't "can him as secretary of commerce isn't quite apparent. Maybe he thought one spanking was sufficient.

Work Compacted

What Roosevelt then did was to consolidate Henry Wallace's Board of Economic Warfare with Jesse Jones' Reconstruction Finance Corporation, compacting them into a new Office of Economic Warfare under direction of Leo T. Crowley, borrowed from another bureau.

Leo's mission is to dig a modicum of order out of this chaos, and then to turn it over, after next election, to whatever vice president inherits it.

The next vice president, naturally, won't have anything authorative.

Yet, if Jimmy Byrnes graduates into the vice-presidential spot, it promises to be the genuine article.

Vice President Wallace, we hear, is quitting. It is kinda too bad. He has been a hard worker on the issue of Pan-Americanism and did fine work.

But now's the political end of Wallace! That's the dope I've heard concerning him.

Not a Promotion

This isn't precisely a political beginning for Jimmy Byrnes, either. No man whose past includes seats in both houses of Congress, a place on the federal supreme bench and a "deputy presidency" in his capacity as war mobilizer can feel that he's getting much of a promotion to the vice president's desk in the United States Senate.

Yet, if Byrnes makes good there, who knows what will follow? He would be next in line if F. D. R. doesn't care for a fifth term, which most folk deem rather unlikely. Meanwhile he'll be a great convenience to certain individuals in highly prominent positions.

As a Carolinian, Byrnes would solidify Democratic southern influence. He is a smart man, too, and an extremely likeable personality. Congress likes him. Even with the minority he is popular.

Lewis Wins Big Stake if Labor Board Approves the Bargain Made in Illinois

By MARK SULLIVAN

The coal strike has entered a new phase. Mr. John L. Lewis, for his miners' union, has negotiated a contract with one group of mine owners, the Illinois group. The contract cannot take effect until approved by the War Labor Board. If the board approves, then, presumably, the other mine owners will be willing to make the same contract.

John L. Lewis

Everything depends on whether the Labor Board approves the new contract. If it does approve, Mr. Lewis wins, and wins big. He gets for his miners an increase of pay as large as he ever hoped for. The increase is from $45.50 a week to $63.50. (Based in both cases on a six-day week.)

Even more than in money, Mr. Lewis wins in prestige. He makes his defiance of the War Labor Board stick—he continues to defy and he gets away with it. The Labor Board indeed is left in a rather humiliating position. The board some weeks ago directed Mr. Lewis to sign a different contract. The contract which the Labor Board directed Mr. Lewis to sign was one stipulated by the board itself—not one arrived at by negotiation between Mr. Lewis and the mine owners. That Labor Board contract, Mr. Lewis said he would not sign—and he has not signed. He said it flauntingly—and he continues to flaunt.

Original Demands Exceeded

Further, by the contract, Mr. Lewis has now negotiated with the mine owners, he gets money which the War Labor Board said he should not have. Part of the increase in pay Mr. Lewis gets is $1.25 a day as "portal-to-portal pay" — meaning pay for the time spent by the miners in going from the mouth of the mine to the coal vein, called by the Labor Board "travel time." This portal-to-portal pay, the Labor Board said it would not grant. The board said that the portal-to-portal pay was a mere subterfuge for an ordinary general wage increase—which, the board said, Mr. Lewis was not entitled to. Virtuously the board declared:

> "Having found that the facts do not justify a general wage increase . . . the board does not propose to circumvent . . . by granting a general wage increase indirectly or by subterfuge under the guise of portal-to-portal pay."

True, the Labor Board left itself an "out." It said there was a possibility Mr. Lewis might be able to get portal-to-portal pay by a lawsuit against the mine owners, under a statute not bearing on the Labor Board's decision, the wage-hour statute.

This "out" may now save the Labor Board's face. The board may say that the portal-to-portal pay granted in the new contract between Mr. Lewis and the mine owners, is in lieu of a lawsuit, a kind of settlement out of court—indeed the new contract so describes it.

Way Out Needed

Some kind of "out" the board needs, plainly and painfully. For the board must pass on the new contract between Mr. Lewis and the mine owners. It has strong motives for wishing to approve—in order to end a headache for itself and for the President. It would save the president from part of his trouble with Mr. Lewis—save him from trying to put compulsion on a man he finds he cannot compel.

On the other hand, if the board approves the new contract, it yields what it said it never would yield, puts in peril its whole policy, perhaps its very existence. By approving, the Labor Board would break a ceiling it set up over wages in all industry, the so-called "Little Steel" formula. This ceiling declares there must be no increase in wage rates in any industry higher than fifteen per cent above the level of January 1, 1941. And the board, in its previous decision, said the coal miners were already getting slightly higher than the ceiling. By approving the new contract the board would grant Mr. Lewis—under the name of portal-to-portal pay and other names—an increase carrying mine wages far above the Labor Board's ceiling. The ceiling could hardly last a day. For other labor leaders, seeing the board yield to Mr. Lewis, would at once make similar demands.

Inflation Affected

To the same effect, the board, if it approves the new contract, would yield in the fight against inflation, and high cost of living. For an addition to the cost of mining coal is an addition—whether it be called an increase in wage rates or portal-to-portal pay. Coal would cost more to the consumer—indeed the new contract stipulates that it will not take effect until and unless the Office of Price Administration permits an increase in the price of coal to the consumer. Moreover farm leaders, watching jealousy any concession the administration makes to labor leaders, would at once demand higher prices fo rcrops, for food.

Obviously, many important matters depend on whether the War Labor Board approves the contract Mr. Lewis has made with the mine owners.

The Functions Of AMGOT

From the Pittsburgh Press

Much depends on the Allied Military Government of Occupied Territory, whose first branch has started to operate in Southeastern Sicily. AMGOT, as it is called, can advance or retard military victory. It can help create conditions for a just and lasting peace, or it can multiply the obstacles. Though its function is civil administration, as the only Allied agency in direct contact with the liberated populations, its influence for good or ill is beyond measure.

Fortunately the London and Washington governments, foreseeing the importance of this delicate function, left nothing to chance. Long ago they began training mature civil administrators of all kinds, with special emphasis on the area to which these officers were to be sent. So Major Gen. Lord Rennel of Rodd, the widely experienced Briton heading AMGOT in Sicily, and his American deputy, Brig. Gen. Frank J. McSherry, have an expert staff of civil affairs officers to start with.

Of course their number will be very small compared with the horde of native municipal and state officials used. The problem is to utilize existing local agencies and personnel of government to the largest extent possible, and at the same time to break completely Fascist control and influence. That is hard because, under a dictatorship, virtually all offices are held by party members. Though AMGOT rules out "active" Fascists, "local officials will be kept in office on the basis of co-operation, performance and good behavior."

By protecting freedom of worship, and free press and free speech within the limits of military necessity, by abolishing race discrimination laws, by providing equal justce, by serving as liberator rather than as conqueror, AMGOT may win the hearts and minds of the people as our armed forces won the military battles.

A Correcting Influence

From the Cincinnati Times-Star

From sources rather close to the White House come the anticipated attacks on Congress, which is now taking a summer recess after nearly three years of continuous sessions. From our own Congressman Elston, and more or less in reply, comes a vigorous report of stewardship such as members of both Houses will be making in various parts of the country, now that they are back among their constituents.

He notes that Congress "has given to the president every law he needed, and every dollar required for the prosecution of the war." But it has taken up arms against "bureaucratic bungling, waste and extravagance;" it has abolished some useless agencies; it has begun to recapture from the executive powers which should never have been delegated to it; it is "no longer a party to rubber-stamp legislation," and it has "regained the confidence of the American people."

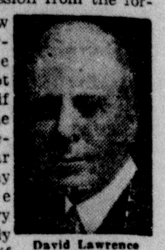

By and large, these claims of credit due Congress cannot be disputed. It has not shown courage and foresight in every matter which has come before it; but its batting and fielding averages—what it put through and what it checkmated—are both quite good. In a word, the emergence of an independent-minded Congress, after years of subservience to the White House, has acted as a bracer to American political life and, to a degree, as a restraining and correcting influence on both the excesses and futilities of administration trends.

Psychology Takes Sensational Role In War Evolution

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, July 23—Psychological warfare has assumed really a sensational role in the evolution of the war.

Russia is evidently counting on a powerful repercussion from the formation in Moscow of a "Free Germany" committee but it would not be surprising if the effect of the news were to begin to spread fear inside Germany concerning the kind of a military government likely to be imposed if if Hitler's government is overthrown and the first overtures for peace are made by a new German government.

David Lawrence

It may well be that Britain and America are content for the moment to let the dispatches from Moscow create the impression that as the war proceeds the German people may have to make a choice between surrender to Stalin or to the British-American mechanism for occupying Germany and holding it during the transition period that must precede the making of peace. If the German conservatives who have for many years lived in mortal terror of communism insist on clinging to Htiler and prolonging the war, they may find a Red army marching into Berlin and dictating the internal administration of Germany for a long time.

It is conceivable that Britain and America are quite willing to let the effects of Moscow's newly announced activity sink in, for inevitably there must be a considerable churning of all these contingencies among German leaders as the turn of the tide in the war approaches.

Rome Raid Repercussions

There is another front on which psychological warfare takes on new importance. It is in relation to the internal situation in Italy. It can well be imagined that the bombing of Rome was decided upon only after weighing all the pros and cons of the effects that might arise from such a bold step. There can be no denying that the Pope's protest and plea against further bombings was anticipated. It means a worldwide discussion of the dilemma in which the Allies find themselves as Mussolini hides his military arsenals under the shadow of sacred shrines and cultural monuments.

Even now it is doubtful whether Mussolini will wish to declare Rome an "open city" because this would mean the shutting up of vital military plants located in Rome. The Italian dictator will count on the strength of the Pope's protest to keep the Allied airplanes away from Rome. Meanwhile, the Allies will be compelled to make more raids in order to impress the Italian people that they should demand the neutralization of Rome. It cannot be overlooked that the Allies are thus bent on achieving for themselves a military advantage by forcing the Italians virtually to abandon their military installations in Rome.

Air Power Dramatization

The fact is that neither the Nazis nor the Italian Fascists have been considerate of cultural objects in bombing Britain but there is an old saying that two wrongs do not make a single right. If the Allies could not survive except by destroying cultural objects by means of air bombings, history might be more lenient but it is evident that the raids on Rome were undertaken with the avowed objective of dramatizing Allied war power and precipitating the very debates and discussions inside Rome that are going on today. This means that the penetration of the morale of the Italian people has begun and if Italy surrenders many hundreds of thousands of lives will be saved.

As for the effect throughout the Catholic world it may be said that the Allied cause will not be materially improved and may even be damaged among the nations of the world, especially those which are not active participants or who cannot perceive the immediate objectives of a strategic nature involved in the decision to bomb Rome.

While the Vatican itself has not been touched and care will be taken in the future to avoid damage to the religious shrines of Rome it may be taken for granted that in these days of indiscriminate attack, with weather changes making targets sometimes difficult to discern, the risks in raiding Rome, if continued, may prove to be greater than the military gains.

Bombing Expected

It can be taken for granted that the bombing of military objectives in Rome is no surprise to the Pope. It will be recalled that Archbishop Spellman made a special trip to visit His Holiness a few weeks ago and it is plausible to assume that the Pope was advised that unless Mussolini declared Rome an open city the exigencies of military combat would require the intensified assault to put out of commission the sources from which the Italian government has been supplying the explosives and bullets with which to kill or maim American and Canadian and British and French troops now advancing in Sicily toward the Italian mainland.

It will be interesting to see how this latest phase of psychological combat turns out, for it may influence the course of the Allies in subsequent military steps in Central Europe.

Leave My Heart Alone

BY ADELAIDE HUMPHRIES

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS

KAREN BELL, wealthy and lovely, has been the sweetheart of another member of her rich Florida set.

PAUL WYATT, since childhood. However, she surprisingly encounters a young stranger, obviously not of her social standing, and learns that he is MARTIN HALIDAY.

YESTERDAY: Karen finds that a kiss in the moonlight by Martin Haliday is as spine-tingling as she had dreamed.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

IN THE BROAD daylight of the days to follow, Karen blamed that kiss that she had dreamed, and that Martin had made reality, on the moon. Hadn't he told her that there was a different perspective in the saner light of day? Even the trailer camp, that had looked like a little village lifted from a fairy tale, was ordinary, even dingy, he had said, when seen in the harsh, revealing light of the sun. And when Karen had said that it did not matter who she was, or who he was, on a night like that, he reminded her that it would the next day.

It had not really been his fault, or hers; it must then have been the fault of the moon, moon madness that made one do things one never would think of doing at any other time. It was madness that was to return to Karen during the moonlit nights that followed, when she remembered that kiss and could not, in her heart, regret it, for hadn't she wondered what it would be like to be kissed in such a way that chills would run up and down her spine, her heart would pound, and reason would be banished? Wasn't that tasting life, learning from experience, instead of from hear-say and songs and books?

No, she could not honestly regret that kiss, any more than she could entirely forget it, although its donor had asked her to do just that, promising that it would never happen again, as of course it never would. She never would trust the moon again, even if Martin had assured her she could trust him. She would not trust Fate, either, whom he had called a temptress, if not always to be denied. Maybe she ought not even trust herself.

When Paul returned he would give her her ring. It might be a good idea, as Marty had remarked, for her to wear that symbol and reminder. For, after all, a girl who was going to marry one man ought not go around getting kissed by another. She would not like it if she knew, for example, that Paul had been kissing little Eva Parks, who had such a crush on him, although he was so much older, the night of the Festival when they had walked down to the sea. It would not be that Karen would be jealous—she had assured Paul she would not be—but it just would not have seemed fair or sporting. Now, although she could not regret that kiss, Karen did feel conscience stricken when she thought of Paul. It wouldn't have been so bad if it had happened before the announcement of their engagement. It was pretty shabby to let Martin kiss her behind Paul's back.

There was a wire from Paul that next day saying that the boat had docked safely and that Denise's boy was fine; her father was about the proudest grandfather on earth, and he, Paul, was eager to be back with Karen. He hoped she had missed him as much as he had missed her. She must remember that there was something that had to be attended to as soon after his return as possible. It was signed, "With all my love, Paul."

It was a long message and quite an ardent one, coming from Paul. It did not sound like him. It almost sounded as if he had something on his conscience. For he had been gone such a short time and they were used to much longer absences. The something to be attended to would, of course, be her ring. Paul seemed to feel very strongly that she ought to be wearing it. He usually signed off with some current slang slogan, like "Yours until the ocean dries up," or something equally trivial and silly, or with a briefer and more serious note, such as simply "Your old pal," or "Ever yours." That "With all my love"—well, it sounded guilty, too, although, of course, it wasn't. She was the guilty one; therefore suspicion reared its ugly head. Like herself, Paul probably felt that now that they were formally engaged he should play the part of an ardent lover more thoroughly. He ought to know that that was not necessary, not between them.

Yet it was not so much Paul whom Karen found herself waiting eagerly to see, as it was that small, unknown nephew of hers. She was so eager, so filled with anticipation for that meeting, that it seemed those few days would never drag by. She was so eager that she was, to borrow Martin Haliday's words, "scared silly." For Karen was almost as afraid of that small child who soon was to become a part of their household as Martin had claimed he was of women.

"Suppose he doesn't like us," Karen said to Cousin Ellen. "It must be very difficult for such a little boy to have to meet a lot of new relations, to know he was to live with them, depend upon them, not only for the necessary things, but for things like love, since his parents would be so far away."

"A child meets such issues better than the average adu't," Cousin Ellen replied, from her shrewd knowledge gained, not from motherhood, but from having been foster mother to many children during long years of spinsterhood. "Children know instinctively whom they can trust and depend upon and whom they can't. They adapt themselves very readily. They soon forget their parents or grief of any kind. They live in the present instead of in the past and the future, which is the mistake all adults make."

In other words, they accept and like whatever life "dished out," borrowing from Marty once more. Maybe one could learn from a little child. "Just the same," Karen said, "it seems a pity if they forget the ones who love them most." Had Denise realized, in sending her boy away to safety, that she might be sending him away from her in other ways? Poor Denise, one's pity should be for her and for all the other mothers of all the refugee children being sent to this country.

Those few days that dragged so endlessly finally had to come to an end. The nursery quarters were all ready, scoured and scrubbed, brightened and decorated; even the new toys, purchased in the five-and-ten, were in place. It had been amazing, really, that Martin had managed to find models of airplanes that even a small boy could put together, puzzles and games, toy guns and targets, a whole army of soldiers complete with tanks and cannons and all the rest of the paraphernalia.

Karen had been somewhat dismayed that so many of their purchases had been such warlike playthings, especially for a little boy who must have been too near that awful reality.

Martin had said, "You don't want him to be a sissy, do you?" Scoffing at her attitude. He said all boys played war, whether it be against imaginary Indians or factual enemies. This little fellow, of whom Karen had told him as much as she knew, would be no different from any other.

She supposed Martin, having been a little boy, should know. She did not want her nephew to be a sissy. There would not be any place for sissies in the new world that this latest and, she prayed, last war would create.

That was why there were wars, though; boys, who became the men of the nation, made them, while the little girls, who grew into the women, could not understand why they liked to fight and conquer. Warriors and mothers. Martin had agreed that it had always been that way, and probably always would be. But he had said, "Defenders, not warriors, for men must fight to preserve what they believe in. And women must learn to look beyond the personal and think of motherhood in its broadest sense, to all who suffer and need her. It is not just one mother's loss that matters, but the heart's blood of a nation."

That had been before he had told her his philosophy: to accept and like whatever comes, even war, she supposed, if out of it could come a better world for all peoples. She had not understood everything Martin had said at the time, so often he said even serious things with that mocking air of his, but she could, in thinking them over.

It was funny how the things that young man said kept coming back to her. It was probably because she had never heard anyone talk as he did. Most people did not put their thoughts into words, or their feelings. But Karen was not thinking of Martin this day. All her thoughts and feelings were for that small boy who soon would be another dream turned into reality.

Overdrawing Your Point Balance?

SOUTHLAND SHRIMP SALAD: Point-wise main dish.

By LOUISE BENNETT WEAVER
AP Food Editor

Don't let your meals bog down just because some meat points are higher these days. A variety of taste-enticing and nutritious meat alternates is the answer to that biggest of rationing problems.

FISH IS MORE ABUNDANT and less expensive now, so run in another fish dinner each week. For a change have fish fillets smothered in tomatoes (fresh from the garden) or fish stuffed with corn filling and baked. And a fish salad gives extra nutrition to a meal that requires little preparation. The salad can be made up well in advance and chilled until needed.

USE FRESH FISH the day that it comes from the market. If it is very fresh (just caught) it can be held over a day, provided it is stored in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Cooked fish is appetizing in meat into half inch cubes, using scissors. Luncheon meats are quite low in point cost. Served chilled, they make a satisfying meal when a hot broth or hot creamed or escalloped vegetable is included in the menu. Remember that even if the day is a sizzler at least one hot food is a dinner must.

BEAN SOUP is now simmering in my kitchen. It is seasoned with a bone, leftover from a five pound shank end ham shoulder which was our roast-of-the-week for last week. Now for the soup recipe: Wash a cup of navy or lima beans, cover by four inches with cold water and soak over night. Place beans, with water in which soaked, and ham bone in a kettle, add one-half cup diced celery and celery leaves, one-fourth cup each chopped onions and green peppers, four parsley sprigs, one-fourth teaspoon pepper and six cups water. Cover tightly and simmer three hours. Remove the bone, pick off any small pieces of ham (I got one-third cupful). Strain soup through a sieve. Press the soft beans through. Add the ham, one-half teaspoon salt and one-fourth teaspoon paprika. Reheat and serve.

Southland Shrimp Salad

1 lb. canned or fresh shrimp
3 tomatoes, sectioned
Parsley
1 lemon, cut in wedges
Cole slaw
Real mayonnaise

Prepare the shrimps and chill. Heap them in center of chop plate and surround with tomatoes, lemon wedges and circle of cole slaw mixed with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

CREAMED EGGS and fresh peas, a crisp vegetable or tart fruit salad fortified with nuts give an assortment of meat alternates that are point-wise and budget controlled for summer serving. Tomatoes or green peppers stuffed with cooked lima or navy beans or corn, well seasoned and topped by thin slices of cheese, also are timely.

Freshly bought DICED LUNCHEON MEATS put flavor in creamed onions, green beans, macaroni loaf or vegetable salad. Cut the loaves and cakes when eked out by rice, bread crumbs and vegetables.

For Better Burners

Keep the burners on gas stoves clean for better service. When cool, wipe them off with a damp cloth. Wash weekly in soapy hot water and scrub with stiff brush. Weekly care helps keep the stove in good working condition.

Tasty Cases

Green peppers, cut in halves and simmered for ten minutes, make tasty and colorful cases for creamed or scalloped mixtures.

Cleaning Electric Stoves

When cleaning an electric stove, be sure that it is cool before wiping off with warm soap suds applied on a soft cloth. To save electricity put the kettle over the heat unit before turning on the heat.

Serve a peppy sauce such as tartar or horseradish-mayonnaise with hot or cold plain or spiced tongue. And also garnish with thin slices of lemon. Lemon juice brings out best flavors of this meat.

Selected Rails and Specialties Attract Buyers in Stock Market

NEW YORK, July 23 (AP) — Buyers of selected rails and specialties still were plentiful in today's stock market but many leaders suffered from neglect.

Earnings, both actual and prospective, especially for the carriers and utility senior issues, seemed to inspire the principal demand. Further Allied successes in Sicily and other battle fronts were viewed as helpful but, for one reason or another, failed to stimulate the list as a whole. This led to further cashing of profits here and there on the thought that something of an oppressive nature might be overhanging the market.

Gains of fractions to around 4 points were well distributed in the early part of the proceedings and many peaks for the past 3 to 6 years were established. Top marks were trimmed in the majority of cases at the close and losers were well represented.

The Associated Press sixty-stock average was up .2 of a point at 52.8. Of 889 issues traded, 374 advanced, 301 declined and 214 were unchanged. Transfers totalled 914,250 shares compared with 822,460 the day before.

Prominent in the "new high" class were Sante Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio Nickel Plate common and preferred, White Motors, Pepsi-Cola, White Rock, Austin Nichols and preferreds of Wabash, Electric Power & Light, American Power & Light and Allegheny Corp. Others on the upside included Douglas Aircraft, Pere Marquette preferreds, Allied Chemical, Texas Co., Southern Pacific, Great Northern and Continental Baking.

General Motors and Chrysler were under water the greater part of the time but ended up ⅛ each. U. S. Steel was off and Bethlehem up ¼. On the losing side were Pennsylvania, Youngstown Sheet, U. S. Pipe & Foundry, American Can, U. S. Rubber, North American, Cerro De Pasco, Sears Roebuck, Sperry, Eastman Kodak, Westinghouse and Oliver farm.

Tilting forward in the Curb were Humble Oil, American Light, American Cyanamid "B" and Phoenix Securities. In arrears were Creole Petroleum, American Gas, Salt Dome Oil and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Turnover here was 253,960 shares versus 255,825 yesterday.

Eckhart Boy Pleads Guilty To Shooting Two Playmates

A 14-year-old Eckhart boy who was arrested July 11 by state police for shooting two of his playmates with a shotgun, was found guilty after a hearing in juvenile court yesterday morning before Magistrate Elizabeth R. Menefee.

Sentence of the boy, who pleaded guilty, was held in abeyance. According to statements of the boys involved, they felt equally responsible and told the court that they probably would have done the same thing under the same situation.

The injured boys were Roy Pape, 13, and Joseph Klosterman, 14, both of Eckhart. They had been treated for minor leg wounds at Miners hospital after the shooting and were dismissed.

Eggplants are frequently attacked by the potato bug. The average Victory gardener usually has only a few of these plants, so the bugs can easily be knocked off the plants with a stick and into a can of kerosene held under each plant.

Nova Is Crammed Full of Confidence He Can Whip Louis

Cosmic Punch Kid of Boxing Believes He Can Lick Any Fighter Now

OAKLAND, Calif., July 23 (AP) — Lou Nova, the cosmic punch kid of boxing, has convinced himself again that he can whip Joe Louis, or any other fighter for that matter.

The Nova of 1943 is crammed full of confidence. He has banished from his mind such material substances as his knockouts at the hands of Louis, Lee Savold and Tami Mauriello, who flattened him in his last three important fights.

This assurance is from his manager, R. Ray Carlen. Whether Nova discovered his new found confidence by peering into the mystic realm of Yogism is not clear to Carlen. But he says Nova still stands on his head during periods of reflection and solitude.

Big Lou has been living in Southern California where he bought a ranch. He is in Chicago now to finish training or his postponed return match with Savold, rescheduled for Aug. 9.

Carlen left Oakland today to join his charge. Before leaving he expressed conviction Nova had a good chance to climb up to the top of the heavyweight pile.

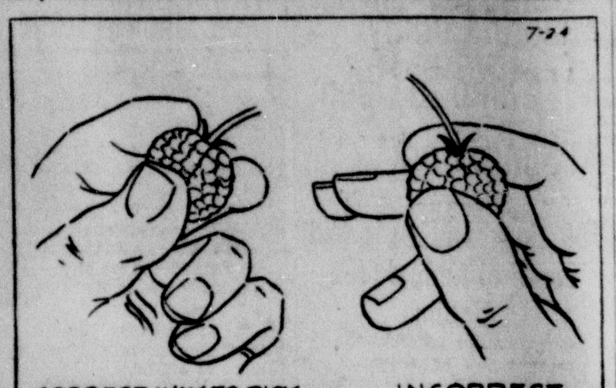

Mild mannered Carlen takes a more realistic view of the prizefight business. He is a firm believer in the premise that an old fashioned whack on the chops is more effective than mind over matter. He also thinks that Louis may never defend his crown by the time he gets out of the army.

This being the case he feels certain Nova, now twenty-eight years old, can beat the rest of the heavies around, including both Savold and Mauriello, who stopped his fighter last year.

For this year Nova's record is unimpressive to say the least. He made two appearances at Portland, Ore., winning a ten-round decision from Chuck Crowell and stopping Paul Hartnek in three rounds. Crowell is known far and wide as a canvasback, or horizontal finisher, even though he does try to throw punches. Hartnek also is hardly a fair second-rater.

Nova's pugilistic career has been disappointing to his followers who once thought him destined for the championship. He's still in demand, nevertheless, with offers to meet Mauriello again in New York; Mello Bettina in Detroit; Jimmy Bivine in Cleveland and Johnny Shor in Baltimore.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Right and Wrong Raspberry Picking in Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY

If you are fortunate enough to have red raspberries in your Victory garden, or if some neighbor has given you the privilege of picking in his or her berry patch, learn the right and wrong way of picking these delectable berries.

Simple as it may seem, there is a right and a wrong way to pick raspberries and correct picking has much to do with the berries holding their flavor and firmness. Right and wrong raspberry picking is illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

The correct way to pick a raspberry is to grasp the berry lightly between thumb and two fingers, as illustrated, and pull from the "core" with steady, even pressure. It is incorrect and results in bruised berries to use just thumb and one finger, as illustrated.

Remember that raspberries picked early in the day remain cooler and keep longer than those picked later. As the heat of the day increases berries become softer and the skin is more easily punctured.

Rhizopus rot, the principal cause of "whiskers" on raspberries, does not readily penetrate unbroken skin but easily infects fruit with broken outer covering.

Allow raspberries wet with rain, dew or fog to dry on the bush before picking.

Serve 'Em Raw

Whenever possible make raw salads just before they are to be served, as there is a loss of vitamins from cut or peeled vegetables when they are allowed to stand. This applies to cabbage and other vegetable slaws.

Toast Trick

French toast can be cooked on the waffle iron for a change. Stack up several slices, layered with creamed dried beef or honey, cinnamon spread or shaved maple sugar.

Wehrle, Goggin Are Leaders in Golf Tournament

CHICAGO, July 23 (AP)—Upholding golf's amateur ranks, Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., punched a par-breaking 68 today to tie pro Willie Goggin of White Plains, N. Y., for the thirty-six-hole lead in Tam O'Shanter's $10,000 All-American Open.

Meanwhile, Patty Berg of Minneapolis took a four-stroke lead in the $600 Women's Open by authoring a 36-36—72 which established a course record for women. Patty had four birdies and matched par on the other fourteen holes to shoot the lowest round in her eighteenth-month come-back campaign. Women's par is 37-39—76.

Spar Betty Hicks of Long Beach, Calif., had a respectable 74 for a thirty-six-hole aggregate of 153, while Kay Byrne of Rye, N. Y., took an 83 for a total of 162.

Wehrle, eliminated from the All-American Amateur Tournament yesterday, required only thirty-three putts in shaving two strokes from par on both nines with a pair of 34's. He was stroking for birdies on thirteen holes from distances of ten feet and less.

The 37-year-old Goggin, who always has grabbed his share of cash in the money circuit although never winning a major tournament, shot a 70 to match his front-running score of yesterday. Two birdies and seven pars gave him a front nine of 34, but on the back side he had to scramble for a regulation 36 by counter-balancing two bogeys with a pair of birdies, one of which was made on an eighteen-foot putt.

Another first round leader, Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., dropped only a stroke off the pace, registering a 71 to be grouped in the 141 bracket.

A pair of 70-shooters, Felix Serafin of Pittston, Pa., and Bill Kaiser of Louisville, placed at 142.

The 143 bracket was packed with six competitors—Bob Cochran of St. Louis, the second leading amateur; Leland Gibson of Kansas City, Mo.; Sgt. Clayton Haefner of Spartanburg, S. C.; Ralph Hutchison of Bethlehem, Pa.; Andy Gibson, the wee Scott from Baltimore, and veteran Jug McSpaden of Marion, Pa. Hutchison made the grade by shooting a 68, seven strokes under his first round score.

Two-time Tam Champion Byron Nelson of Toledo, placed in the 144 list. He matched par 72 for the second straight day.

Autograph Collector To Be Here Today

The urge to collect goes almost back to Adam, and Noah's fame rests partly on his animal collection. The urge today is expressed itself in a different manner. For it's not mustache cups, China dolls, or pipes which serve as the main outlet for this collecting mania, but signatures of any one who even approximates fame from a Maharajah of some unknown state to Betty Grable.

One of the best known collectors is Bill Farmer, of Winchester, who is appearing today in person on the stage and in the Maryland theater lobby. Farmer is the leading contender to the title of the world's champion autograph collector.

This contender, who is on a National tour in behalf of the United States Treasury department's campaign to sell War stamps, will be featured today in co-operation with the sale of the July Shangri-La War stamp drive, the mystery ship to bomb Tokyo.

Farmer will display in addition to explaining the intricacies of autograph collecting to all who are interested in this mania for the handwriting of the famed and near famed in the Maryland theater lobby starting at 2 p. m. toady.

On the same program, "The Youngest Profession," with Virginia Weidler and Edward Arnold. Guest stars, Lana Turner, Greer Garson, Robert Taylor and William Powell.

Hepburn Stars Again With Spencer Tracy

Katharine Hepburn's first motion picture since "Woman of the Year" starts tomorrow at the Embassy theater. The offering is M-G-M's, "Keeper of the Flame," in which Miss Hepburn is co-starred with Spencer Tracy as she was in the earlier production.

The drama presents Miss Hepburn as the widow of a man who died under mysterious conditions. Tracy is a newspaper man investigating the circumstances surrounding his death.

Sherlock Holmes Film Is At Garden

Basil Rathbone plays Conan Doyle's famous character in "Sherlock Holmes and the Secret Weapon", opening today at the Garden theater. Nigel Bruce, as Dr. Watson, is excellent, as are the rest of the cast, which includes Kaaren Verne, Lionel Atwill and William Post, Jr.

Also on the Garden program today is a Western "The Old Chisolm Trail", starring Tex Ritter, Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight and Jennifer Holt.

Another chapter of "Smilin' Jack" rounds out the Garden's program.

The SPORT TRAIL

NEW YORK, July 23 (AP) — Now comes Carl Snavely to sand up all our smooth ideas about the probable strength of football teams at schools using naval and marine reservists next fall.

We were under the impression such schools would put teams on the field which would be a cross between the Chicago Bears and a Sherman tank, considering the wealth of stalwart young men already possessing football degrees available.

Under the circumstances we did not blame schools not similarly equipped for doning fright wigs and hurrying to the basement at the prospect of playing such teams, and sympathized with Lehigh in its decision to refrain from such lion and lamb competition. Lehigh has army students, and so far the army has declined to give its blessing to varsity competition by its trainees.

Our ideas concerning the probable strength of these Navy V-12 teams were sound except for one minor detail. They weren't quite true. In some instances, anyway.

Not Many Prospects

Mr. Snavely, the able Cornell university coach, has found just one outstanding football player among the 1,660 reservists quartered there. Otherwise, the prospects include a handful of regular players from small colleges, men with freshman or squad experience elsewhere, a half dozen Cornellians, and a batch of youths fresh out of the high school ranks.

Now we have heard Mr. Snavely before. You might not call him a pessimist exactly, as a pessimist is just an optimist who has curdled, and Mr. Snavely we always found genial enough. However, he might complain a little of lack of depth in his backfield if he just had Jim Thorpe, Red Grange, Ernie Nevers and Frank Carideo as starters.

Discounting any melancholy statements which might issue from Ithaca, the fact remains that facts are facts and the roster tells its own story. Ralph C. Calcagni, Penn captain elect, is the only standout. The others are lads named Joe as far as wide renown is concerned.

It also is pointed out in the Cornell publicity release that, although more than 100 boys are signed up for football — eighty of them service men—daily attendance at the summer practice averages about forty. It seems the boys are studying, too.

That the Cornell situation isn't isolated is indicated by the fact only three V-12 candidates reported for summer practice at Illinois.

Michigan Looks Strong

That some of the schools in the V-12 category will have corking teams seems assured. Michigan, for one. The Wolverines have some Wisconsin players, as well as Bill Daley of Minnesota. Michigan hasn't defeated Minnesota since 1932, but this may be the year the jinx will be broken, even if Fritz Crisler has to use Minnesota players to do it.

Northwestern and Illinois also seem well heeled as a result of the V-12 program, and Purdue has eight Illinois players enrolled. Those Big Ten games this year are liable to see the players running up and down in midfield trying to make up their minds which team they should score for.

Anyway, if some of the schools don't have many outstanding V-12 performers available, at least they will have enough players to field a team. Some of them weren't too sure of even that before the student sailors were dumped in their laps.

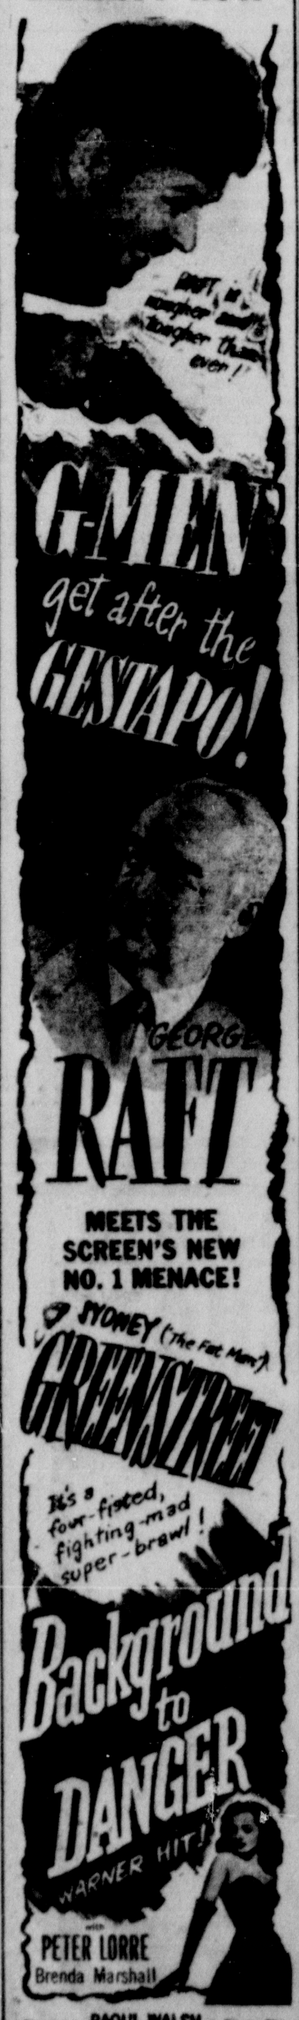

In May American industry turned out three times as many pieces of artillery as in the entire period of World War I.

Borowy Pitches 1 to 0 Victory Over St. Louis

Two Base Error and Double by Dickey Give Yanks Only Run

NEW YORK, July 23 (AP) — Hank Borowy and his finger blisters were doing very nicely today, thank you, and as a result the Yankees were handed a 1 to 0 decision over the St. Louis Browns.

Hank, who has been plagued by blisters all season, finally came up with a day on which they didn't bother him, so he utrned in his first complete game since June 6, limiting the Brownies to five hits and fanning eight as he chalked up his fifth win of the year.

In spite of his classy curving, however, his elbowing was matched by Denny Galehouse, who twirled one of the top games of his career — and then had it taken away from him because of an error by one of his mates.

This came in the first play of the second inning, and settled the whole thing in a hurry. Charley Keller led off the frame and Mike Chartok made a two-base muff of his liner. Then Bill Dickey followed with a double to center—and school was out.

Through the first eight frames, the Browns collected only two hits off Borowy. They threatened all through the ninth, but a double play kept Hank out of the stew on one occasion, and he finally pulled himself out by fanning Chartak, with Brownies on first and third, to end the game.

Until the ninth only one St. Louis runner had gone as far as second.

For the Yankees, who continue moving farther out in front in the American League race, it was the twenty-third one-run victory of the season, while the defeat was the sixteenth pinned on the Browns by the same slim margin.

Cardinals Nip Giants 1 to 0 In Thriller

ST. LOUIS, July 23 (AP) — The Cardinals stretched their winning streak to five in a row and held onto their 5½-game National League lead today, squeaking through with a 1 to 0 victory over the New York Giants.

Harry Gumbert and Howie Krist combined on a five-hit whitewash job to take the verdict over Ken Chase, and Ace Adams, who served up a six-hitter between them. Gumbert took credit for the victory, his eighth of the year against four setbacks, although he had to retire in the seventh because of a sore arm.

The lone tally came in the second inning and was brought home by Frank Demaree. He singled with one away, went to third on Ray Sanders' hit to right center and cake-walked across on Georgie Fallon's long fly to left. In the third, the cards twice got runners as far as third, but they were stranded, and for the rest of the way only one man got as far as second.

Meantime, Gumbert and Krist let only two giants reach third and only one other got as far as second, as the New Yorkers ran their losing string to four in a row.

Manager Mel Ott of the Giants, played the game with his brand new spectacles, but even they didn't help. He got one single, but in the ninth inning, with the tying run on third, he fanned to end the game.

Cubs Whitewash Boston Braves 5-0

CHICAGO, July 23 (AP)—Claude Passeau won his tenth game for the Chicago Cubs—and his fifth in a row—today by shutting out the Boston Braves on four hits for a 5 to 0 decision.

The Braves made no more than one hit in any single inning and Passeau retired the side in order in four of the nine frames.

Meanwhile the Cubs made eight hits off Jim Tobin, the Braves' hurler, combining three in the fifth for three runs. Stan Hack accounted for two of them with a double. The Chicagoans scored their other two runs one at a time, in the first and eighth innings.

Dodgers Trim Cincinnati by Score of 2 to 0

Vander Meer Gives Up Only Five Hits but Loses Eleventh Game

CINCINNATI, July 23 (AP) — Between the Brooklyn Dodger outfield and the elbowing of Whitey Wyatt, the Reds never had a chance today.

The Dodger fly-chasing trio chalked up eighteen put-outs to equal the Major League record, and Wyatt, making his first mound appearance since June 30, pitched a four-hitter to give the Bums a 2 to 0 victory over the Rhinelanders and hand Johnny Vander Meer his eleventh defeat. Vander Meer gave up only five hits.

Wyatt knocked in the first Dodger run with a two-bagger in the eighth, and Lou Olmo, the new Puerto Rican fly-chaser, pushed the other tally across with a triple in the ninth.

The Dodgers started an all-right-hand batting lineup against Vander Meer's southpaw slants, and as a result, first-baseman Dolph Camilli was benched for the first time in his five-year career with the Brooklyns for some reason other than illness.

Red Sox Split With White Sox

BOSTON, July 23 (AP) — After snapping his Major League record string of consecutive chances at 342 by dropping an easy pop fly, Bobby Doerr, Reb Sox second baseman, bashed out a homer to rally his teammates to an 8-7 victory over the Chicago White Sox in the tenth inning first game of today's doubleheader. "A grand slam" homer by Vince Castino enabled the Chisox to take the nightcap, 5-1, behind Lee Ross' effective pitching.

The Chisox had a 7-2 lead in the eighth when Doerr made his first miscue in sixty games by dropping Luke Appling's fly in short center. Undaunted, Doerr poled out his eighth homer of the season in the last of that frame, during which the Red Sox netted two runs. Pete Fox's homer with two on and two out put the Red Sox into a 7-7 tie in the ninth and a walk, an error, an infield out and George Metkovich's two-bagger manufactured their winning run in the tenth, against relief pitcher Joe Haynes.

Castino's first Major League homer came after starter Dick Newsome, with a one run deficit, loaded the bases in the fourth inning of the second game. Ross held the Red Sox to four hits until the ninth, when singles by Metkovich, Leon Culberson and Doerr, and Fox's infield out enabled the Red Sox to escape a shutout.

George (Pinky) Woods served as a relief pitcher in both games for the Red Sox. The former Holy Cross star worked the last two innings of the first game, winding up as the winning pitcher, and in the ninth inning of the second game, giving up but one hit.

The Army-Navy Argument

Many or most of those colleges adopted or fostered by the Navy are now starting summer football training, facing a fall campaign.

The great majority of those colleges under Army control have abandoned football, or will do so very soon. Football in these places is withering and dying out.

In this division we thing the Navy has adopted much the wiser plan of action.

We are not talking about sport for sport's sake—but football for war development.

We are not talking about football for any public morale. We are thinking of football in terms of physical development and competitive spirit.

We are not thinking of football in terms of any sectional or national championship, in terms of great crowds or former pageants.

We are thinking of football in terms of body contact, hard pressure, quick thinking on the field, both mental and physical alertness, and above all—team play.

The Navy thinks football is an important training factor. The Army disagrees.

The Main Point

The Army makes one main point. Here it is—there won't be time enough for students—they are practically all in the service on both sides—to complete the necessary courses and still play football.

My main point is this—there will be no Army or Navy college that will work any harder or through any longer hourse than the Cadets at West Point or the Midshipmen at Annapolis.

Their schedules run around 16 hours a day. This is about all the human system can stand.

Any schedule of this type demands a certain amount of recreation on the side—even though it be as gruelling a game as football is.

About the Time Required

The Navy has decided that only those can play football who keep up in their work—and have a few hours each week to spare.

This is entirely reasonable. Why can't the Army inductees meet this same simple requirement?

Suppose they have only short periods for practice as they have at West Point and Annapolis? Suppose they could only find this brief time three or four days a week?

I can't imagine any time ,that would be better spent.

Why was it that England and Scotland abandoned football after Dunkirk and then took it up again almost immediately, with enemy guns less than thirty miles away and hostile planes still overhead?

Today England and Scotland have league after league in full operation, with the full support of the government and the people, including service men and civilians.

Both England and Scotland hold that football is a vital part of their war effort where crowds range from 100,000 to 150,000.

It isn't the crowds that count so much. It is the physical fitness and the morale of the servicemen that keeps Great Britain's football program under way.

The Need for Football

It is my belief that you will find a better average of physical fitness and better morale in the Navy colleges than you will find in the Army colleges.

If there was any thought that football impeded the war effort in any way, theer would be over 130,000,000 Americans against it.

But the great majority of those who should know, including most of the boys, happen to believe otherwise.

We believe if Army authorities will only give this subject more thought and dig just a trifle deeper into all the factors concerned, they will keep football going, even though it be on a much more limited scale.

Why should it be that Army students can't keep pace with England, Scotland and the U. S. Navy?—Released by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

Pirates Take Odd Game from Phils

PITTSBURGH, July 23 (AP)—Long Johnny Gee, the Pirates' six-foot-nine inch southpaw, relieved rookie Bill Brandt in the third inning and held Philadelphia to two hits today as the Pirates nosed out the Phils 3-2.

The victory gave Pittsburgh a single-game edge in the series of five.

The Phils scored their runs in the second. Glenn Stewart singled and went to third on Mickey Livingston's double. Al Gerheauser grounded to Frank Gustine, and Stewart scored on Gustine's wild throw to first. Danny Murtaugh's single scored Livingston.

The Pirates came back with three in the third. Pete Coscarart singled and advanced on Jim Russell's safety. Jack Barrett lined into right and coscarart scored. Ronnie Northey's throwin was high and Russell counted. Bob Elliott drove a long fly to left and barrett scored after the catch.

Martin Suggests Dempsey-Louis Exhibition Tour

Says Nothing Would Do More to Boost Morale among Service Men

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, July 23. (AP)—If we had anything to do with the running of our side of the war, and wanted to give the boys in the far places a lift, we know one thing we'd do.

We'd team Jack Dempsey with Joe Louis for the exhibition tour Louis will embark upon presently.

That combination, we think, would be as natural as rain—the current heavyweight champion and the former champion whose prowess forever is being compared with that of the bomber. We guarantee there would be more letters going home starting out: "Dear Mom: Who do you think I saw today? Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis ! ! !" than you could shake a stick at, with the words breathing the tingly, goggle-eyed incredulity experienced by the senders.

Naturally Jack and Joe wouldn't go about knocking each other daffy. Occasionally they might spar a couple of rounds, but even that is pretty strenuous for a guy crowding fifty, as is Dempsey.

Besides, Dempsey's style isn't adaptable to exhibition purposes. He's a tigerish, all-or-nothing sort of gent with only one idea—attack, attack, attack. Look over the record of his so-called exhibition tour a few years ago and you'll see what we mean. It's mostly a list of one or two-round knockouts. He just doesn't know how to take it easy.

Louis is young, and robust, and calm. He could box daily exhibitions without taking a deep breath, and he has the poise to make them just exhibitions, at least as long as the other half of the act remembered his lines.

Dempsey wouldn't have to give any exhibition to be appreciated by the boys. Just the sight of him, in person, would be enough, although he could give talks which would be appreciated.

Fred Corcoran, on furlough from his Red Cross sports program duties in England, reports that Dempsey still is the big name among service men over there; that more questions concern the old mauler than any other sports celebrity.

We had a vivid preview of what Louis' presence means to soldiers. It was at Grand Central station, when the champion came here to be in on plans for the second bout with Billy Conn—the bout which never came off.

One of a group of about twenty young Canadian flying cadets spotted the big guy climbing into a car, and the way those kids made for him was a caution. You'd have thought he was passing out dollar bills the way they lined up for autographs. He wasn't fighting. He wasn't sparring. He wasn't even saying anything. He was just Sgt. Joe Louis still wearing corporal's chevrons, but that was enough. He was Joe Louis in person.

Now there might be some difficulties involved in arranging to team Louis and Dempsey. Louis is a non-commissioned officer in the army; Dempsey is a commissioned officer in the coast guard.

However, we understand the army and the navy and the coast guard and the marines are all fighting for the same thing, so if they can work together in their offensive efforts there is no reason why a soldier and coast guardsman shouldn't work together as morale builders.

"We can't see anything against the idea, and know the service men really would go for it. If Louis alone is good for them, they might as well get a double helping, with Dempsey too. A one-two punch, you might say.

Cleveland Trims Athletics 1 to 0

PHILADELPHIA, July 23 (AP) — The Cleveland Indians' winning streak, the Athletics' string of defeats and Lou Boudreau's whiskers all grew longer today, thanks to a home run by Ray Mack.

The four-base drive, one of six hits allowed by Don Black, gave the Tribe a 1-0 victory over the Philadelphia Athletics for their fifth straight and a sweep of the three-game series here.

It added another day's growth to the beards of Boudreau and his coaches, Del Baker, Burt Shoton and George Susce who have sworn off shaving until Cleveland loses—something that hasn't happened since last Saturday. The defeat was the eighth in a row for the Athletics.

Mel Harder, idle since May 8 because of a fractured ankle, held the A's to four hits in handing them their eighth successive defeat. No Philadelphia reached third base and only one got to second.

Boston Orchestra Concerts Will Be Carried on Radio

Esplanade Events Will Be Offered for Next Several Weeks

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, July 23. (AP)—For the next weeks, the Boston orchestra offerings on the Blue network will supply a series of Esplanade concerts. They will run forty-five minutes at 8:15 being cut to that length to come within dimout regulations, starting Saturday night. The WAVES, celebrating their first anniversary, are to be special guests in the number of 500.

For This We Fight on NBC at 7 is to turn its attention to "World Problems of Labor," speakers to include Matthew Woll, of A. F. of L., and James B. Carey, of C. I. O.

Independence Event

A special half-hour in celebration of independence day of the South American republic, Colombia, is on the Blue at 11:30, to consist primarily of music and song . . . The three directors in command of United States servicewomen will be guest speakers in Navy Bulletin Board of MBS at 5.

The Chips Davis, commando dramas on CBS again are in for a time change. The latest shift puts them from Sundays to 5:30 Saturdays. . . . Another CBS change, for the Groucho Marx show at 10:15, will make Boris Karloff the guest instead of Jerry Colonna.

The Chicago Theater of the Air, MBS at 9, will present "Midsummer Night's Dream" . . . Eric Johnston, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, is to discuss labor-management cooperation in a CBS talk at 10:45 from Spokane, Was. . . . Horse racing on the three nets, NBC, MBS and CBS, will be the Yonkers' handicap from the Jamaica track, at 4:15.

In place of the usual Man Behind the Gun at 7 p. m. Saturday, CBS is to present a documentary broadcast, "Open Letter to the American People," announced as "exposing the dangers of race hatred." The postscript will be by Wendell Willkie.

Sunday Features

Jerry Lester is to try his variety show again on CBS Sunday. The new series, at 7, is almost like the other one that had a short run and will include Fred Uttal, Diane Courtney and Ray Sinatra's band. Also there will be guests, starting off with Miriam Hopkins.

Another new Sunday series, is a commentary for the Blue at 3:15 by Hanson W. Baldwin, writer on military affairs.

Arturo Toscanini is scheduled to return to the NBC Symphony orchestra at 5 on NBC for another of his summer series on behalf of war bonds. This time Nan Merriman, mezzo-soprano, will be feature soloist. . . . Josie Iturbi continues with the New York Philharmonic on CBS at 3. He not only conducts but solos at the piano.

Chaplain Award

A feature for NBC at 1:30, temporarily replacing the We Believe Series, is to be an army chaplain award, its first, to St. Charles Borromeo church, of Peru, Ind.

On the guest roster there are these among others: CBS 7:30 Irving Berlin in We the People; NBC 8 Olsen and Johnson in Paul Whiteman's show; MBS 8 Ruth Bryan Owen on A. L. Alexander's Mediation board; Blue 9:15 the Colonel Stoopnagle in Basin Street, although he's not a singer ,or is he.

Discussion periods will include Herbert Hoover and Rear Adm. Yates Stirling, retired, on aid to Nazi-Victimized Jews, via CBS at 10:45; the Reviewing stand on MBS at 12 noon on "Axis Propaganda"; This Is Official on the Blue at 1 p. m., with J. Edgar Hoover, head of F.B.I.; and the University of Chicago roundtable for NBC at 2 p. m. about "Peurto Rico."

An added speaker for NBC at 4:30 is Vice President Henry Wallace on "American Tomorrow," to come from the fair grounds in Detroit.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

IS HIS HAND STRONG?

YOU CAN tell, to a certain extent, whether your partner has a fair hand or a worthless one, even if he has not bid at all, from what your opponents do. When they bid to exactly game in No Trumps, you can consider it highly probable that your side has enough high cards to provide a good sound opening bid if they were bunched in one hand, probably a little more than that. By subtracting the strength you hold from that amount, you are probably not far from knowing just about what your partner has. Doing that can sometimes guide you to the sound defense against the contract.

(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	1 ♦
Pass	1 ♠	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT

North led his heart J against that contract in a rubber game. The Q won, the diamond A and K were taken, the club Q finessed to the K. West won the heart return with the A, and he then scored the diamond Q and four clubs, giving him nine tricks.

"My partner is certainly much stronger than I am," North could have said to himself. "If I were short in hearts, I could be pretty sure that was his suit, so I would then lead it. But I have too many, and probably the only honors in it possessed by our side. Where, then, is his strength, and what is his suit? Spades, almost certainly. Also, he probably has some kind of stopper in clubs, if that is really East's long suit. Besides, an important side entry for the clubs may be in spades, and if so it should be knocked out early."

That reasoning would have caused a spade lead. South would have been able to get his suit set up before the club finesse was tried, whereupon he could have taken the setting tricks in spades.

Your Week-End Lesson

Are you familiar with the most vital part of the 1943 Laws of Contract Bridge, the "proprieties of the auction and play?" Therein are listed quite a number of things from which a player should refrain. Do you know what they all are?

Memoriam

n loving memory of Loretta May Stems, who died July 23, 1936.

Although we miss her greatly,
We are very proud to say,
God gave to us an angel
Just seven years ago today.

You have gone but not forgotten,
To a better home we know,
And yet our hearts are bleeding,
Because we loved you so.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

Frank B. Hymes vs. Meeda Ellen Hymes, No. 17941 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Allegany County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff a vinculo matrimonii from the defendant.

The bill states that they were married on the 23rd day of July, 1923, and that the defendant abandoned and deserted the plaintiff on or about the 16th day of May, 1941, and declared her intentions to live with him no longer and such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than eighteen months last past prior to the bringing of this suit, and that such separation is beyond any reasonable expectation of reconciliation; that there were three children born unto this marriage; namely, Kathleen, aged 17; Frank Phillip, aged 14; and Russell Lee, aged 5, all of whom are now in the custody of the plaintiff and the said plaintiff desires the permanent custody of these children be awarded unto him; that the plaintiff has been a resident of the State of Maryland for more than one year, and the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland, and the plaintiff asks for an Order of Publication against the defendant and for general relief.

It is thereupon this 15th. day of July, 1943, by the Circuit Court for Allegany County, sitting in Equity, ordered that the plaintiff, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in Allegany County, once in each of four successive weeks on or before the 17th. day of August, 1943, giving notice to said absent defendant of the object and substance of this bill and warning her to appear in person or by solicitor on or before the 2nd. day of September, 1943, to show cause, if any she might have, why a decree ought not be passed as prayed.

WHY PAY RENT?

A dandy well-built semi-bungalow, with bath, furnace, porches and basement. Situated on a corner lot size 64' x 80' and also included is another building formerly a grocery store, which, with comparatively little work, can be converted into a dwelling. Price for both $3,900.00.

Even in normal times this six-room bungalow could not be built for less than $5,000.00.

The rent one would pay for this type of property plus the rental from the other building would pay for itself in less than ten years.

C. & P. Presents Honor Medal to Robert Slemmer

Receives Distinguished Service Award for Saving Child's Life

In recognition of his service in an emergency involving the protection of human life, Robert O. Slemmer, Park Heights, repairman for the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone company, was awarded the company's "Theodore N. Vail Distinguished Service Medal" at a special presentation dinner held last night at Central Y. M. C. A.

The first person in the Western Maryland district to receive the medal, Slemmer was honored for saving the life of four-year-old Margaret Belt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl O. Belt, Park Heights, after she had fallen into a reservoir, April 15, 1942. Slemmer administered artificial respiration and physicians said that his efforts alone saved the child's life.

The medal is named after a former president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Theodore N. Vail, and after his death in 1920 a memorial fund was established for these awards. The medals are awarded to employes of the Bell Telephone System in recognition of unusual acts or services which conspicuously illustrate the same high ideals that governed the policy of Mr. Vail as to public service.

First Awarded in 1921

The first award was made in 1921 and during the twenty years it has been in existence only 1,129 employes in the country have received it, and there are 350,000 employes in the system.

Besides the bronze medal, which is two inches in diameter, Slemmer received a small replica of it to wear on his lapel and a cash award of $100. Tasker G. Lowndes, director of the C. and P. Telephone company, made the presentation.

In a short address, A. B. Haneke, vice president and general manager from Baltimore, described the types of public service given by telephone company employes. He pointed out the training courses in protection and first aid by which employes prepare themselves to meet emergencies. It was through the first aid course that Slemmer obtained the knowledge which directed his actions.

Congratulates Employes

Haneke also congratulated the Cumberland employes on the teamwork they showed on this occasion and on many others.

C. J. Smith, district plant manager, Baltimore, and R. L. Schleunes, district commercial manager, were also honor guests.

Besides the guests of honor, among those present were:

J. Bartholomaeus, district plant engineer at Hagerstown; C. O. Briddell, district plant supervisor, Hagerstown; J. H. Cromwell, plant manager, Cumberland; E. H. Bender, plant wire chief, Cumberland; V. J. Lindner; H. M. Beyard; G. E. Williams; E. W. Rohman; H. S. Cooper; J. V. Matt; B. R. Kerns; P. S. Bixler, Jr.; L. Deneen; S. H. Storer, Jr.; R. I. Old Zoning Code May Be Used by Commission

A zoning code ready for adoption here in 1926 but then delayed for a "temporary" period, may become the backbone of a new zoning ordinance that the recently named Planning and Zoning commission is expected to propose, Harold W. Smith, secretary of the body, said yesterday.

Rudolph P. Miller, consulting engineer of New York, was hired by the city to draw up a building and zoning code in the twenties. The building code was adopted but the zoning code was delayed because of trouble being experienced in Baltimore under a similar law, because of some opposition here and because of a lack of interest.

Contour Strip Cropping Pays Big Dividends

Conservation Officials Say It Also Saves Crops and Soil

After a two-year experiment in erosion control by contour strip cropping and diversion terraces, Foster Yost, Accident farmer, is convinced that conservation pays big dividends in saving crops and soil, according to officials of the Allegany Soil Conservatoion District.

Three years ago Foster Yost, whose farm lies on the hillside east of Accident, started worrying about the damage that erosion was causing on his cultivated fields. His corn and potato fields were hardest hit. A few gullies were well started and several hard storms washed out planted potatoes in spots, but the greatest damage was from sheet erosion which took away a thin layer with each rain.

After seeing an erosion-control exhibit at the Pennsylvania farm show, Yost discussed the problem with John Carter, Garrett county agent, who recommended contour strip cropping and diversion terraces as a solution. Yost liked the idea of the terraces to intercept the water and carry it off to a safe outlet, but did not think that he could farm the curved rows necessary for strip cropping.

Visited Other Farms

At Carter's suggestion, Yost, along with C. E. Bishoff, Emory George, Arnold George and Carter, drove to Middletown to see erosion control work that farmers there are carrying on.

After seeing several contoured farms there he still did not think he would like to farm curved rows, but he had seen that contour farming would work, and knew that if Frederick county farmers could do it, he could too.

In co-operation with the county agent, two other Garrett county farmers, Emerson Bishoff and Frank Silber, had already established demonstrations of contour strip farming, so Yost agreed to make a third demonstration on his farm, with diversion terraces, as well as strips.

William Nace of the Allegany Soil Conservation District assisted in laying out the work. Level lines to mark the strips were run out and marked with a plow, and lines on a slight grade were run for the terraces. With a crawler tractor, hired from Ernest Griffith and a terracer (similar to a road grader) borrowed from the Allegany Soil Conservation District, they constructed 3,200 feet of diversion terrace at a cost of $90.

Furrows Are Used

Because a rather large area drains into these terraces, Emory George plowed in some level pasture furrows in his hill pasture above the Yost farm. These furrows will not only help the pasture by conserving summer moisture, but will protect Yost's terrace by retarding excess run-off above them, and are a fine example of co-operation for conservation.

Yost says that the money spent on this job has been repaid in soil and crops saved in the two seasons it has been in operation. Forty acres, or all the cropland on this farm, is in contour strips and after working them for two years, Yost is convinced that the trouble of making the change and the little bother with curved rows is a small item compared to the saving of soil, fertility and moisture.

MOTORISTS WITH FOUR SERVICEABLE TIRES CANNOT GET FIFTH

Motorists who now have four serviceable tires will not be issued a fifth, according to Karl W. Radcliffe, chief clerk of the local ration board.

Due to the present tire shortage the board has been ordered to reject all applications for a fifth tire, Radcliffe said. The order, dated July 21, will be effective until further notice.

Twenty travel permits were issued yesterday by the board here. All but four of the applications were for visits to neighboring states. Six motorists wished to visit in the state, five in Pennsylvania, five in West Virginia, and one each in Virginia, New York, New Jersey and Delaware.

Hearings for pleasure drivers will be resumed July 31, Radcliffe said, when a number of motorists of this section will be asked to appear before the board.

The offices of Board 1-1 will resume the normal closing schedule Monday, and will be open from 9 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. Monday to Friday. The office closes at 12 noon on Saturdays.

MAY BECOME HOME FOR JUVENILES—Under consideration by the board of county commissioners as a possible location for the Allegany county home for juvenile delinquents is the Community building in Lonaconing, (shown above). Located in the rear of Jackson school, the building was formerly a mule stable which was converted into its present state by boys employed by the National Youth Administration. Youths on the NYA erected additions to the front and rear of the old structure, made window sashes, doors, trim work and also rain spouting in the NYA work shops. They also installed electric wiring. Owned at the present by the mayor and council of Lonaconing, the Community building has been cited as ideal, both in construction and location, for a juvenile home and steps are being taken by the commissioners to obtain it for that purpose.

All such furloughs are optional, Fahey said, as men can go into service the same day they are accepted if they desire.

Community Building at Lonaconing May Become County Juvenile Home

County Commissioners Discuss Possibility of Acquiring Stone Structure

Possibilities of taking over the Community building in Lonaconing for adaptation as a juvenile county home were discussed yesterday by the board of county commissioners and it was indicated that steps would be taken to give the county one of its greatest needs at much less than the $100,000 allotted for the same purpose at the recent legislative session.

Sponsored by the mayor and city council of Lonaconing, the building was erected under the National Youth Administration in 1939 and was used as a resident center until recent cessation of all NYA activities.

Is Fully Equipped

Fully equipped with modern conveniences and designed to accommodate both boys and girls, the Community building was cited by the commissioners and by several residents of Lonaconing itself as ideal for a home for juvenile delinquents.

The property is owned by the town of Lonaconing which purchased the lot and leased it to the federal government. In July, 1942, the title to the building automatically became Lonaconing's by a non-renewal of the lease. Therefore, the federal government has no title to the property and its disposal rests with the mayor and council of Lonaconing.

Other than some furniture, cooking and refrigerating equipment, the county already owns most of the furnishings, and it is estimated that the county's interest in the building and equipment surpasses that of Lonaconing.

Dormitory facilities would provide for approximately 100 children. Built in accordance with federal laws and in accordance with the strictest sanitation requirements, the building is expected to pass the inspection of the licensing boards without any difficulty. Besides the Community hall itself, there is a large well-built garage which may easily be converted into a workshop.

Will Contact Coney Officials

The commissioners decided to contact the mayor and council of Lonaconing about the town's selling its interest to the county. The matter will then have to be submitted to the couny juvenile welfare board and the state licensing board for inspection and approval.

Maintenance costs for ordinary wear on the building were estimated at about $5,000 yearly. The commissioners estimated that Lonaconing had an interest of approximately $7,000 in the property.

The general opinion advanced yesterday by the commissioners was that since the biulding was erected with taxpayers' money, it is only just that the taxpayers should be the first to gain whatever benefits might be derived.

Recommendations Are Presented on Child Welfare

Twelve Suggestions Are Made by Aims and Objects Committee

Recommendations of the Aims and Objects committee of the Allegany County Co-ordinating Council for Child Welfare were presented by James E. Spitznas at a meeting with the Recreation committee of the council in the board of education office Thursday evening.

A general plan for meeting the out of school, social, educational and recreational needs of children and youths was recommended by the committee which includes, Judge William A. Huster, chairman, Miss Lillian C. Compton, Mrs. William A. Eisenberger, the Rev. Edward P. Heinze, Dr. Albert C. Cook and Webster K. Edwards.

The twelve recommendations made by the committee are as follows:

Suggest Neighborhood Councils

First—To establish a neighborhood council through the Parent-Teacher association of each district, to include representatives of religious, social and educational agencies of the neighborhood; to develop a program of social, religious, educational and recreational activities for all children and youth.

Second—Serious consideration on the part of the trained personnel of the Y.M.C.A., the Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts, schools, and all religious organizations to develop a leadership training program.

Third—To use all available resources within the neighborhood itself, such as playgrounds, gymnasiums, rooms for reading, social centers and rooms which might be used in the program.

Fourth—Organization of baseball and softball leagues for younger boys. These to be sponsored by the different fraternal and religious organizations in the neighborhood.

Fifth — Pooling of books in a neighborhood center to serve as a clearing house to keep the books circulating.

Sixth — Exploration of sending many more children and youth in the county to summer camps.

Seventh—Set up a schedule for showing educational and entertainment films in the neighborhood.

Eighth—Use of young people in drives and fund raising campaigns.

Ninth — Organization of older children for part time jobs on farms and orchards.

Trained Leaders Needed

Tenth — Make the council responsible for seeing that children and youth in neighborhoods, charged with delinquency, be made active members of different recreational, religious and social groups in the neighborhoods.

Eleventh—Enlistment in a leadership training program and the establishment of branch clubs out of groups having similar experience as the Police Boys club, with the suggestion that more police officers might be trained in the technique of directing youth in club activities.

Twelfth—Consideration by the recreation committee of this general plan, its revision, expansion, elaboration and refinement and its institution through the local Parent-Teacher association leaders, called in by the recreation committee, to study the plan and through neighborhood council and its volunteer leaders, which the local Parent-Teacher association groups will set up.

Impromptu talks were given on the work of the East Side Playground Association by Mrs. J. Orville Fier, president of the Allegany County Parent-Teacher Council, and Paul Brant. Mrs. Robert J. Moss spoke on the Pennsylvania Avenue Playground Association.
